Chiang's Son Leads Troops Fighting Out Of Red Vise

Mechanized Force Reported to Have Reached Isolated 7th Army Corps

Nanking (Monday), Nov. 15 (AP).—Strong forces spearheaded by China's first mechanized troops are fighting their way out of a Communist pincers movement in the battle of Suchow, progovernment reports said today.

Chinese Central news dispatches said the mechanized force, led by Col. Chiang Wei-kuo, younger son of President Chiang Kai-shek, had reached units of the Communist-isolated Seventh Army Corps at Nienchuang, 33 miles east of Suchow.

(These reports were more reserved than all Chinese press accounts in Shanghai which said Gen. Chiu Ching-chuan's mechanized forces had turned the red tide around Suchow Sunday.)

The official government spokesman declined to confirm the junction of the Suchow troops with the Seventh Corps, which has been under heavy attack by Communists pouring across the Grand Canal.

Early Fall Indicated

Earlier information in Nanking had indicated it was only a matter of time before Suchow, gateway to Nanking, would fall. The city of 300,000 population is about 200 miles northwest of China's capital. It was difficult to determine whether the reported joining of government forces at Nienchuang offered hope for retaining Suchow.

On the west flank of the Suchow battle, said the press dispatches, four Communist columns reportedly moved southward to menace isolated Suhsien, 45 miles from Suchow. Chinese reports told of heavy fighting midway between Suchow and Pengpu, about 100 miles south.

While the possible fate of central China was being settled at Suchow, official sources in Peiping confirmed the evacuation of government regulars from Paoting, Hopei provincial capital, 90 miles southwest of Peiping. Only a local garrison was left behind.

All Eyes on Suchow

But all China looked to Suchow to learn whether the hard-pressed government forces could slow down the Communist timetable for their program of conquest.

Travelers from the north central China city described the situation as "panicky." They expressed belief Suchow may fall to the Reds within three or four days, unless by-passed, and that its airport may be captured within 48 hours.

(A small detachment of United States Marines was flown to Tientsin from the United States Navy base at Tsingtao today to guard the American consulate and to help evacuate Americans from northern China. The Marines were sent to Tientsin because of looting of food shops by Nationalist soldiers.)

(A Chinese Communist broadcast reported the Seventh "is being segmented and crushed" east of Suchow. "Two divisions of its Six-

Forrestal Holds Airlift Well Worth 100 Million a Year

Berlin, Nov. 14 (AP).—James V. Forrestal, United States Secretary of Defense, estimated today the Allied airlift to blockaded Berlin is costing at the rate of 100 million dollars a year. "But," he added, "it's a good investment for peace."

Forrestal, before departing for Frankfurt and Paris, said he has been discussing western Europe's military defense with statesmen on his tour. The talks were "casual," nothing "specific."

Asked whether he would stay in President Truman's Cabinet, Forrestal said:

"That is up to the President. I have already notified him I would not be able to serve through his entire Administration."

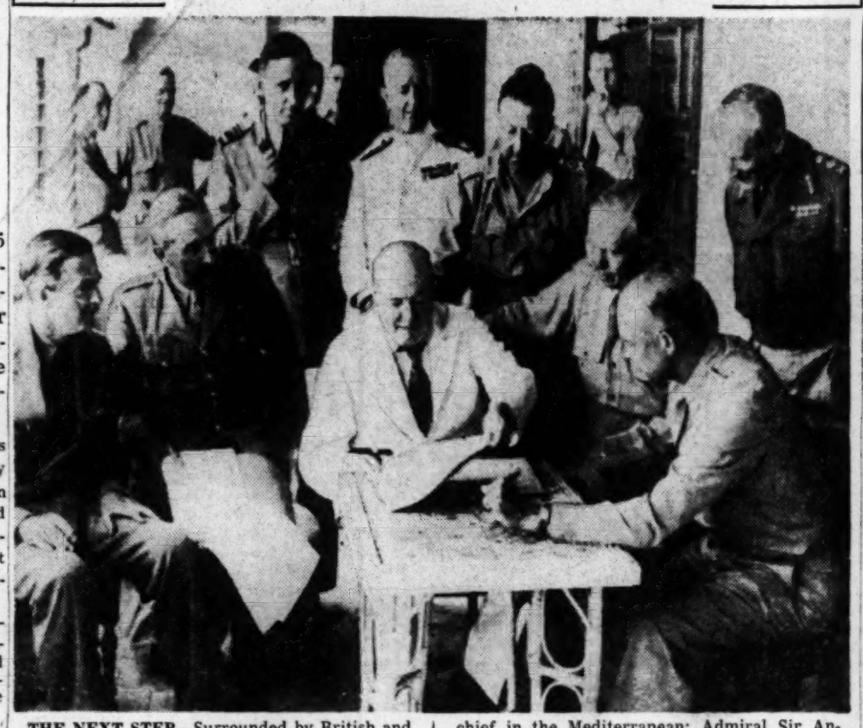
Eisenhower Tells How Allies Turned Toward Seizure of Sicily



THE NEXT STEP—Surrounded by British and American war leaders, Prime Minister Winston Churchill studies a report at the Allied Planning Conference in North Africa. In the group (from left) are Anthony Eden, then British Foreign Secretary; General Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the Imperial General Staff; British Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, air commander in chief in the Mediterranean; Admiral Sir Andrew B. During the final weeks of the Tunisian campaign, particularly after the outcome could be definitely foreseen, major staffs were busy planning our next campaign. As directed by the Casablanca Conference, this was to be the capture of Sicily.

At Casablanca the Sicily operation was decided upon for two reasons, the first of which was its great immediate advantage in opening up the Mediterranean sea routes. The second was that because of the relatively small size of the island its occupation after capture would not absorb unforeseen amounts of Allied strength in the event that the enemy should undertake any large-scale counter-action.

Because of the estimated inability to supply several assault divisions and their reinforcements over the southern and eastern beaches, we studied and tentatively adopted a plan that contemplated assault by echelon, beginning in the southeast, followed by a second one in the south, and a third in the vicinity of Palermo on the north coast.

No one really liked the plan for echelon attack. Its complications, dispersion, and successive rather than simultaneous assaults were cited as risks outweighing the chance of defeat through lack of port facilities. Montgomery, especially, always a believer in the power concept, desired to throw heavy forces

Britain Asks Western Talk On Berlin

Meeting With Russia Likely to Be Barred Until Blockade Lifted

By John G. Rogers

Paris, Nov. 14 (NYHT.).—Great Britain proposed today that the United Nations' new appeal for resumption of conversations on the Berlin problem be discussed here on Tuesday by the three Western powers at a conference of their Foreign Ministers.

At the same time, it appeared likely that the three Western countries — the United States, Britain and France—would stand on their principle of refusing to negotiate on Berlin with the Russians so long as the Russian-imposed blockade of Berlin remained in effect.

It also appeared plain that the three Western powers felt some degree of irritation over the Berlin appeal which was made yesterday by Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, president of the U. N. General Assembly, and Trygve Lie, U. N. secretary general.

[The Associated Press quoted United Nations officials in Paris as saying privately that they expect Prime Minister Stalin of Russia to agree quickly to the appeal for the four-power talks. And from Moscow, it reported highly-placed foreign diplomats were equally confident his answer would be affirmative.—Editor's Note.]

Feel Burden On Russia

The Western countries, it was understood, felt that since Russia had vetoed in the Security Council on October 25 a resolution calling for the lifting of the Berlin blockade, the Lie-Evatt appeal should have been sent to Russia alone—

Israel Balks At Obeying U. N. Order

Cabinet Debates While Officials Oppose Directive To Yield War Gains

By Kenneth Bilby

Tel Aviv, Nov. 14 (NYHT). Israeli government representatives indicated clearly today they had no intention of complying with the order of Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, United Nations mediator, for a troop withdrawal from the Negev Desert.

While the Jewish cabinet debated the Bunche directive which reached the Foreign Office at noon today, an official government spokesman reacted with unusual violence to the idea of relinquishing Israeli battle gains and turning the Negev into "a vacuum."

"It is a very shameful document. It is bound to damage the prestige of the United Nations because the order is completely devoid of elementary justice and reason," he declared. "You can't produce a vacuum out of two thirds of our country."

Military leaders plotted on large maps the demarcation lines behind which Israeli and Egyptian troops are ordered to withdraw by November 19. They pointed out that the Jewish northern line represented withdrawal beyond positions held October 14 when fighting started, and that every major Egyptian base seized in the sweeping offensive would have to be relinquished.

Claim Order Means Loss

Israeli officials said the line to which the Bunche order would remove them—from Julis and Ibdis east to Zeita—actually would mean a new territorial loss. The demarcation line is about two miles north of the erstwhile Egyptian Majdal Faluja line and would compel withdrawal of Israeli troops from Hatta Haratei and the battered settlement of Negba, in the opinion of Israeli leaders.

Since the Bunche order demilitarizes the Negev south of this line except the slender Gaza coastal strip, the Egyptians would be required to evacuate the Faluja pocket. Israeli leaders say the effect of this is to snatch from their hands an important segment of the Egyptian army. "There ought to be rejoicing in Cairo tonight," a government representative commented bitterly.

If obeyed, the Bunche order would give the truce commission the most formidable supervision job it had ever undertaken. The observer staff would be responsible for the vast desert area of several thousand square miles in which neither Arabs nor Jews would be permitted to send patrols or any type of military equipment. It would mean that almost all points held by the Egyptians except the Gaza coastal strip and the section south of Jerusalem would now be a no-man's land.

Egyptians Would Keep Road

The Egyptians would continue their control over the road from Jerusalem south to Hebron if King Abdullah's Arab Legion did not intervene. They would be permitted to send nonmilitary supplies to Jerusalem through Beersheba.

Dr. Bunche requested the government to name liaison officers whom Brig. Gen. William Riley, chief of staff of the truce commission, could meet to work out a schedule for withdrawal. A gov-

Hildreth Gets Inauguration Chairmanship

By Edward T. Folliard

Key West, Fla., Nov. 14.—Melvin D. Hildreth, Washington lawyer, has been appointed by President Truman as general chairman of the 1949 inauguration.

Hildreth's appointment was announced here tonight by Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer, a member of the President's vacation party.

Daniels made the announcement for Eben Ayers, assistant White House press secretary, who is ill.

Hildreth, 4831 Indian lane nw., handled grandstand arrangements for three Roosevelt inaugurations. He had been boosted for the general chairmanship in Washington Democratic circles.

As general chairman, he will direct approximately 30 committees which will handle most of the major phases of the January 20 ceremony and the following presidential procession from the Capitol to the White House.

Condon Favors Probe Group's Continuance

By Louis Cassels
United Press Reporter

Dr. Edward U. Condon, noted atomic scientist attacked by the House Un-American Activities Committee last spring, said yesterday he believes the committee "has an important and difficult function to perform" and should be continued.

In an interview with the United Press, the director of the National Bureau of Standards also repudiated published reports that he plans to resign in January.

Speaking from his own experience, Condon said he thought that some "reforms in procedures" are necessary to insure that "American principles of fair play" are followed in the House committee's investigations.

But he added that he is confident that Committee Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) will soon be convinced by "first-hand experience" of the value of traditional American civil rights granted to the accused.

(Thomas was indicted by a Federal grand jury last week on charges of conspiring to defraud the Government by padding his office payroll. The charges, carrying a maximum penalty of 32 years in prison, may come to trial in January.)

Has 9-Point Program

Woods Will Ask to Reinstate Resident Hotel Rent Ceilings

By the United Press

Rent Director Tighe E. Woods will ask Congress to slap rent ceilings back on more than one million living units in apartment hotels, it was disclosed yesterday. Transient hotels would not be affected.

The controls were lifted by law last April 1. Woods' plea to put them back will be part of a nine-point program to extend and strengthen the rent control program. The rent boss has outlined it to leaders of veterans' organizations.

In what amounts to a change of front by the Administration, Woods will recommend that the new rent law include a provision for "voluntary" rent raises of up to 15 per cent for leases running through 1950.

This provision was roundly denounced by President Truman when Congress first wrote it into law almost two years ago. Mr. Truman said tenants would be blackjacked into signing the agreements, whether they wanted to or not.

Although 1,700,000 tenants signed the rent-raising leases in 1947, only 300,000 have signed so far this year. Woods told the veterans' group he saw "no reason why the system should not be continued."

Woods previously had disclosed to a reporter these five key points in his probable recommendation to the new Democratic Congress:

1. A year's extension of the controls past March 31, the present expiration date.

2. Restored controls over evictions.

3. Criminal penalties for violators. (Now there are none.)

4. Triple damages where landlords are prosecuted for overcharges by rent officials. (Now payable only where the tenant sues, and he is usually reluctant to sue.)

5. The right to restore controls, or impose them for the first time, in communities that may become boom towns in the new defense program.

In his conference with the veterans' leaders, Woods listed, in addition to these proposals and those covering apartment hotels and 15 per cent leases, two additional points:

1. An extension, and possible tightening, of the present veterans' preference in the sale and rental of new houses and apartment units.

2. Continuation of the local board system, which Woods said has strengthened, rather than weakened, the rent control program.

He said that persons who live permanently in apartment hotels are as entitled to protection as tenants anywhere else. Their apartments were freed of controls along with hotels generally.

U. S. Army Mystified

Flow of Red Army Deserters To West Zone Halts Abruptly

Berlin, Nov. 14 (AP).—A small but steady dribble of Russian army deserters into western Germany has suddenly and unaccountably stopped.

United States Army sources are mystified.

For a long time, scarcely a week went by without a few Russians "going over the hill." They hid in farmhouses with German girls. Or they came in to the Americans or British and represented themselves as political refugees. Officials estimate there have been about 12,000 desertions since 1945 in the Berlin area. The flow stopped abruptly late in October.

"The Russians probably have moved in new troops," said one authority. "When they are due to go back to Russia the desertions no doubt will start up again."

Another said, "It may be the new, tighter restrictions that we have heard about. At night they practically lock 'em up.

"It is so tight it extends even to the air force. They have rationed each pilot just so much gasoline so he can't get too far away. And the NKVD (Soviet secret police) go up in another plane and follow certain planes."

Most deserters are ordinary enlisted men. As such, their value from an intelligence viewpoint is just about zero.

Few officers desert. The highest rank picked up here in many

Elizabeth Has a Son; 'It's a Boy!' Echoes Round British Realm

IT'S A BOY—Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, became at 4:14 p. m. (EST) the proud parents of a new heir to the throne of Britain. The baby became a prince automatically, by decree of King George VI, and thus is second in line to rule the British realm

Baby Prince May Be King Some Day; Huge Crowd Goes Wild Over News

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth gave birth to a prince tonight who may some day become King of England.

The second-in-line heir-presumptive to the throne was born at 9:14 p. m. (4:14 p. m. EST).

Buckingham Palace, where the child was born, announced that "her Royal Highness and her son are both doing well."

The first description of the baby came from an anonymous member of the royal household who was allowed to look at the infant: "A lovely boy, a really splendid baby."

To Announce Weight Today

A reliable source said tonight the birth weight of the baby probably would be anounced Monday in a second medical bulletin.

The source said Elizabeth's doctors in consultation with members of the royal family decided to withhold information about the child's weight until then. There was no explanation as to why this decision was taken.

The London Daily Mirror said the weight of the new prince was 8 pounds. There was no confirmation of this, however.

An hour and six minutes after the 22-year-old Princess was delivered of her first-born, a man in evening dress who was mistaken for the baby's father, Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, appeared in the lighted palace courtyard.

To the huge crowd waiting outside, this was the joyous news, this was the signal that a child had been born.

A royal page informed a police constable, who released the news to the crowd: "It's a boy!"

Shout 'Good Old Philip'

A great shout of "good old Philip" swelled from thousands of throats for the handsome young prince who was married to Elizabeth last year.

Their young prince was born just six days short of the royal couple's first wedding anniversary—November 20.

As the crowd heard the news, high officials of the royal household, their faces beaming in smiles, watched the crowd's reaction from a palace doorway.

In its brief official announcement, Buckingham Palace said:

"Her Royal Highness, the Princess Elizabeth, Duchess of Edinburgh, was safely delivered of a Prince at 9:14 p. m. today."

The official announcement was withheld by the palace for nearly an hour.

The royal heir was born quickly. Soon after accredited palace reporters flashed the word that the Princess was in labor, the announcement of the birth was made.

Prince of Edinburgh

Although the name Elizabeth's son will bear was not announced, King George has already disclosed that he will have the title Prince of Edinburgh and will be addressed as "Royal Highness."

The King, after seeing the baby for the first time, said:

"It's a fine, spanking boy."

Palace sources said that attending physicians were surprised because the princess' labor pains were of such short duration, just less than two hours.

High personages in the royal household were summoned by telephone when the Princess went into labor. But the Prince was born before all of them got there.

The first visitor to the palace after the announcement was made

Another Blessed Event

Girl Born Here on Sunday A Princess to Her Parents

A baby is born—whether of royalty or everyday folk—it's a great day.

In London, it was a prince, son of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh.

In Washington, let it be Edith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Notarianni of 1430 Longfellow st. nw. Maybe not a princess nor a queen and yet all these things and more to her father and mother.

Edith, like the prince, was born Sunday afternoon. Georgetown Hospital was Edith's birthplace.

It was late afternoon when her father, home from walking her 29-month-old brother, Victor, in the park, while her stepbrother, Joseph Hardy, 10, played football, answered a ringing telephone.

"I've got a baby girl for you," said Dr. George Ellis—"7 pounds, 12½ ounces."

"That's fine," said the father, "how is my wife? Is everything all right?"

"Yes," said the doctor, "everything is fine."

And so the news came to the four-bedroom stone house on Longfellow st., where Mrs. Notarianni's mother, Mrs. Mary B. Roach, was running the house in the absence of her daughter, Catherine.

It was about 7 p. m. when Mr. Notarianni arrived at Georgetown Hospital. He had waited to give his wife a chance to rest a bit.

"Hello, how do you feel?" he asked, using the simple words that come at times of excitement.

"Not so good," she admitted, smiling wanly.

She had told her husband that morning that "it will probably be today." She had entered the hospital a few hours later.

"The family had been kidding me all along," she said last night, "telling me I was waiting for the royal birth."

Through the nursery window, Edith, dark eyed like her parents, worked up a wrinkly smile as she eyed the man outside. The nurse beamed.

Father smiled back. A girl was fine with him. He had had no fixed hopes either way before.

Her mother had, though, and her brothers. They wanted a girl.

When Edith's father telephoned his parents, Louis and Rosina Notarianni, in Johnsonburg, Pa., his mother said, "I am so happy it was a girl. My prayers are fulfilled."

Grandmother Notarianni had five boys and a girl, and only her girl is home now.

Her name is Ida, but she is called Edith, and so the babe at George-

Prince and the Commoner

Another Baby Born in London, But There the Similarity Ends

London, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Four minutes before a baby prince was born tonight, a 28-year-old Cockney woman gave birth to a daughter in one of the poorest East End maternity hospitals.

An hour later, as the news of the royal birth was announced over the radio, the young mother, Mrs. Maud Thilp, whose confinement was so vastly different from Princess Elizabeth's, looked up at the midwife and said, "I'll call her Elizabeth."

Elizabeth, born 8 pounds 18 ounces, is the daughter of a $22-a-week bus conductor and his wife. She will grow up in a three-room prefabricated house. For her playroom she will have the drab London docks. Her toys will be a woolly pig and a celluloid doll which her mother bought for her out of her housekeeping piggy bank.

There will be no glamor and luxury in her life. Her 18-months-old brother will go to school first. Unless there's a change in the family fortunes, Elizabeth will leave her lessons for a job when she's 15. If she's lucky, she'll earn $10 a week.

Princess Elizabeth had four of the leading British medical men and trilene—the newest pain-killing drug—to help her through her confinement. Mrs. Thilp did not even have a doctor. Just a midwife and self-administered gas. She was in labor 12 hours.

Slim Truman Lead In Ohio Reduced By 10,518 Votes

Cleveland, Nov. 14 (AP).—Official election tabulations tonight shaved 10,518 votes off President Truman's lead over Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in Cuyahoga County.

On the basis of unofficial figures from the rest of the State, the revision cuts Mr. Truman'sh Ohio margin over Dewey to 6817 votes.

Official figures have not been compiled yet, but complete unofficial figures gave Mr. Truman 1,459,896 and Dewey 1,442,561.

Staid London Is Mighty Glad It Stayed Up for Baby News

London (Monday), Nov. 15 (AP).—Staid old London took the news of Princess Elizabeth's baby proudly and, for the most part, quickly, last night.

The broad avenues and historic squares of the British capital were almost deserted when the news was flashed from Buckingham Palace that a prince had been born. The city's pubs were just closing and many theaters already were dark.

Outside the palace, however, a crowd of some 4000 was waiting patiently in the clear night air. It was there, at the huge wrought iron gates, that the spirits of the British people were highest.

Piccadilly Circus and Trafalgar Square were neglected in favor of the Victoria Memorial with its view of the royal residence. There, working folks mingled with men and women in evening dress.

Radio bulletins brought hundreds more from their homes to the palace gates.

Just after midnight a police car pulled up to the gates and broadcast over its loudspeaker: "Ladies and gentlemen: it is requested from the palace that we have a little quietness, if you please."

Good-natured cheering drowned out the rest of the message and there were calls of "we want grandpa"—King George VI.

Fifteen minutes later, the crowd was told there would be no more announcements and, in the interests of the young mother and child, it was requested to disperse. Only then did the people begin to drift home.

Transportation in London stops at 11:30 p. m. on Sunday nights, so thousands had to walk home.

The crowd did not get a glimpse of Prince Philip, the baby's father. Throughout the evening the long balcony of the palace, scene of many happy occasions in the life of the royal family, remained dark. Apparently it was not considered appropriate for Philip to make a public appearance.

The big celebration for Britain will come today when guns will boom out 41-salvo salutes and bells will peal from thousands of churches throughout the land. It had been prearranged that if the child was born after sundown this observance would be postponed until the following day.

The result of this was that many people went to bed without knowing about the big event. British morning papers do not appear on the streets until dawn.

Embassy Hails Prince; To Fly Big Flag Today

Sir Oliver Franks, Britain's Ambassador to the United States, last night cabled to the royal family in London congratulations from all British citizens in America on the birth of the prince.

Franks also served notice that he intends to run up "the biggest flag that we can find" over the embassy here today at dawn.

He said he plans to invite high United States Government officials and diplomatic representatives of all the British commonwealths to a celebration at the embassy "as soon as possible . . . within a few days."

Purpose of the party, he said, would be to raise toasts to Elizabeth and her son.

WASHINGTON, SUNDAY, JUNE 24, 1894—TWENTY-FOUR PAGES.

HEIR TO THE THRONE

The Duchess of York Gave Birth to a Boy Last Evening.

MUCH REJOICING IN ENGLAND

In Response to Telegrams the Prince and Princess of Wales and Home Secretary Asquith Repaired to White Lodge, Richmond, at an Early Hour—The Queen Kept the Telephone Busy All Day—Cheers in the Theaters—Baby to Be Made an Earl.

London, June 23.—The Duchess of York gave birth to a boy at White Lodge, Richmond, at 9:35 o'clock this evening.

Dispatches concerning the event immediately began to pour into London. The Duchess' labor began at an early hour this morning. Telegrams were sent at once to the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and to Home Secretary Asquith, who was staying at Lonely Park with Henry White, awaiting the call to represent the government at White Lodge.

The Princess of Wales left London at once and the Prince followed her a little later. Mr. Asquith at once took the special train, which has been waiting with the engine's steam up for more than a week, and within forty-five minutes he was at the house.

An official was kept at the telephone almost without interruption throughout the rest of the day to inform the Queen of the duchess' progress.

The first news of the boy's birth reached her majesty before 10 o'clock, or within five minutes after the duchess was delivered. The official dispatches were sent almost immediately. At the Mansion House the news was announced in a bulletin, which attracted a cheering crowd. Hundreds of congratulations are being received at White Lodge.

The birth of the baby was announced in several theaters this evening. The news was received with cheers and the singing of the national anthem.

It is understood that the infant will immediately be made a peer, receiving the title of Earl of Kent.

was 81-year-old Queen Mary. As she drove through the palace gates to see her first great-grandchild the crowd gave her a tremendous cheer.

From inside the royal apartments word came that as soon as the doctors told him he was a father, Philip rushed in to see his wife. She was still under an anesthetic. Philip then went to see the baby who had been taken into the palace nursery.

A few minutes later the happy Duke brought the King and Queen in to see their first grandchild. The Queen embraced her son-in-law and the King shook his hand warmly.

Shortly after Queen Mary arrived the Duke opened a bottle of champagne. The first health to the baby prince was drunk by Philip and his staff, including Lieut. Gen. Sir Frederick Browning, wartime chief of Britain's airborne forces and now comptroller to the Princess and the Duke, and Philip's equerry, Lieut. Michael Parker.

When Philip was advised that Elizabeth had regained consciousness, he returned to her bedside and remained alone with her for some time.

Doctors Join in Toasts

Elsewhere in the palace there were little groups of persons celebrating and talking excitedly. The doctors joined palace officials in drinking champagne toasts to the newborn prince.

In the palace business quarters the telephone switchboard was flooded with calls from all over the island kingdom. Within an hour, notes and messages of congratulations began arriving by messengers.

The fairytale drama of Britain's exciting weekend ended on a high note for the patient throng which had milled outside the palace gates awaiting the news of the historic event.

Standing in the cool November night they saw a royal page dressed in blue walk stiffly from a palace doorway. He strode to the side of a solemn police constable who is always on duty at the gates. The page bent over close to the constable and told him the news in a low voice.

The policeman then quickly walked to the iron railings against which the crowd was tightly packed and declared exultantly:

"It's a boy!" Then throwing his head back and shouting, he yelled: "A prince has been born!"

Word Spread Like Wildfire

Like wildfire the word spread in all directions. Tears welled in many eyes. Cheers rippled through the air to shatter the Sunday night stillness.

The news that Elizabeth's child was a son told the normally stolid Londoners what they wanted to hear—that the royal heir was a child who might some day be their king.

Then a great rhythmic chant of "We want Philip, we want Philip, we want Philip," went up and continued for five minutes.

In the royal suite the proud grandfather of the new prince, the King of England, and Queen Elizabeth, the grandmother, were quietly receiving the felicitations of their household.

No members of the royal family appeared on the palace balcony to greet the crowd. Apparently it was not considered appropriate for Philip to make a public appearance despite the urging of the crowd.

Another great demonstration was touched off when the man mistaken for Philip stepped into the courtyard.

As he appeared a leather-lunged Briton in the crowd shouted: "Is it a boy?"

The man nodded.

"Jolly Good Fellow"

At once the crowd broke into the traditional English song "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The news provided for the people of England a momentous climax to the first year of what was one of the twentieth century's greatest romances.

The birth of the prince apparently was entirely normal despite a flurry of excitement almost exactly 24 hours earlier when Sir William Gilliatt, Elizabeth's obstetrician, made a hurried return to the palace following two earlier routine visits.

Although the princess was not in labor then, Sir William decided to remain in all-night vigil in a room specially prepared for him. His decision to stay in the palace overnight was described as a precaution.

This morning the princess again was reported "normal." She took her regular walk through the palace garden. This afternoon, Sir John Weir, the royal family physician, made his regular visit to the palace, then went home.

Tonight, when the expected time of the birth arrived, Elizabeth was sitting with her lady-in-waiting, Lady Mary Strachey, and her midwife-nurse, Helen Rowe. Sister Rowe, who had been in almost constant attendance upon the princess, called in Sir William.

Hastily Summoned

The obstetrician examined Elizabeth and notified Sir John who came at once to the palace, slipping in through a side door unnoticed by the crowd outside.

There had been an air of expectancy in the palace household throughout the afternoon and evening.

Both physicians saw Elizabeth, then had dinner in the palace.

Miss Margaret (Bobo) MacDonald, who has been Elizabeth's personal attendant since childhood, remained close to the princess all evening.

Official notification of the birth of the new prince of the House of Windsor was forwarded tonight to dignitaries at home and overseas by Sir Alan Lascelles, the King's secretary.

Immediately after the baby's birth Philip sent messages to his mother, Princess Alice of Greece, and his sisters, who are in Germany. The Duke's father, Prince Andrew of Greece, died in 1921.

Shortly before the announcement of the birth, accredited news reporters at the royal court flashed the news that the princess was in labor.

Informed Immediately

The King and Queen and Prince Philip, Elizabeth's husband, were immediately informed of the birth.

The news did not reach the public, however, until almost an hour after the child was born.

When the infant was born, Sir Alan Lascelles, the King's secretary, telephoned the news to British Home Secretary Chuter Ede.

Sir Alan also filled in a missing word—denoting the sex of the child—on previously prepared telegrams and filed them at once from the court postoffice to the governors general of the overseas dominions.

Jubilance in Jungle

The news reached Singapore, the empire's outpost in the Orient, at dawn local time. It spread quickly and brought expressions of jubilation from jungle outposts where British soldiers are fighting a small-scale Communist revolt. There was rejoicing in Singapore's smart hotels. A round of celebrations began everywhere.

Many Australians heard the news on their way to work. Electric carillons at Sydney and Melbourne started playing jubilation music. Radio stations broadcast special programs.

From Ottawa, Viscount Alexander, governor-general of Canada, sent this message to the princess:

"On this happy day as we learn of the birth of a son to Your Royal Highness, I send you on behalf of the people of Canada our most heartfelt congratulations together with our loyal and devoted good wishes."

Queen Mother Notified

Telephone calls were made at once to Queen Mary, mother of the King, and the new prince's great-grandmother, at nearby Marlborough House.

Princess Margaret, Elizabeth's younger sister, who is spending the weekend out of town with the Earl and Countess of Scarborough, also was told at once.

Child of dynasty, the royal infant born to Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip symbolizes the pride and faith of millions who pledge allegiance to Britain's throne.

The babe is second-in-line heir presumptive to the crown now worn by the grandfather, King George VI. But many years may pass before he ever touches a scepter. King George is only 53 and in excellent health. Princess Elizabeth at 22 is apparently assured of a long life, too.

Signals New Generation

In this birth the patriotic Briton sees added depth to the strength and continuity of the constitutional monarchy. The child signals a new generation. To the British it is a generation which, like all the generations before it, holds to the past, yet moves steadily into the future.

Selection of stolid, unpretentious Buckingham Palace for the baby's birthplace was in keeping with that symbolism. The only other royal heir born there made his arrival a century ago. That child was the eldest son of Queen Victoria, who lived to reign as Edward VII. His long and happy life is seen as a good augury for his latest decendant.

But Buckingham Palace will be only a temporary home for the baby. Workmen are nearly through restoring bomb-damaged Clarence House. This is the official residence of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip. It is only a short walk from the palace and near Marlborough House, occupied by the princess' grandmother, Queen Mother Mary. The new household expects to move in sometime this winter.

Meanwhile, a temporary nursery has been set up at Buckingham Palace. Unelaborate, its most historic piece of furniture is a 100-year-old baby bed, last used by the late Duke of Kent, youngest brother of King George VI.

Great Outpouring of Gifts

Gifts for the baby have been arriving at the palace for weeks. Many have been returned to their donors. The royal family makes it a rule to accept presents only from personal friends or from people who, by their position in the public life of this or other countries, age entitled to felicitate royalty.

The family plans no public display of these gifts such as was made of the presents received by Princess Elizabeth at her wedding just a year ago this month.

In fact, unless the donors talk, not much will be known about most of them until—as inevitably happens—the details leak out through talk of the small coterie that surrounds the royal family.

That is in keeping with the Windsor family's studied practice of keeping their private lives as much apart from the rest of the world as does any other British family. And nowhere in the world do people keep their private affairs to themselves so much as in this country where even the flower beds on the front lawn often are walled away from the view of passersby.

Christening to Be Private

The first big event in the baby's life—the christening—will be private. It may take place at Sandringham, the King's favorite country home. If so, it is likely to be

The Line Of Succession

London, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Princess Elizabeth's baby automatically becomes second in line to her in the succession to the throne and automatically a prince. He is the first direct heir born since the birth of the present Duke of Windsor.

The line of succession after the birth will be:

1. Princess Elizabeth.
2. The baby.
3. Princess Margaret, Elizabeth's sister.
4. The Duke of Gloucester, brother of King George.
5. Prince William, elder son of the Duke of Gloucester.
6. Prince Richard, younger son.
7. The Duke of Kent, elder son of the late duke, who was killed in a wartime plane crash.
8. Prince Michael, younger son.
9. Princess Alexandra, daughter of the late duke.
10. Princess Mary, Countess of Harewood, sister of King George.
11. The Earl of Harewood, elder son of Princess Mary.
12. The Honorable Gerald Lascalles, younger son.
13. Princess Arthur of Connaught, aunt of King George.
14. Lord Carnegie, nephew of Princess Arthur.
15. Prince Olav of Norway, nephew of King George V.

Prince Born To Britain's Elizabeth

next month. The royal family usually spends Christmas at Sandringham. Thus the christening could easily become the outstanding feature of the 1948 holiday season.

Selection of a name for the child may not be announced until shortly before the christening. As second-in-line to the throne, the baby may have a lot of names. Tradition and symbolism play a big part in this. On the other hand, each of the parents has short names and each prefers simplicity.

With the father it is just Philip. He didn't even have a last name until less than two years ago, when he became a naturalized British citizen and assumed the surname Mountbatten. The ancient Danish royal family from which he descended never troubled to acquire a last name.

The other is Elizabeth Alexandra Mary. But she was not expected to become first-in-line heiress to the throne when she was born.

Had Seven Christian Names

Her Uncle David, who reigned briefly as Edward VIII and then became the Duke of Windsor so he could marry the American, Wallis Simpson, was weighted down with seven Christian names. That was because at birth he was the eldest son of the heir apparent.

In selecting names for royal children, the British like symbols. There are such as George and Elizabeth for England, Andrew and Mary for Scotland, or David for Wales and Patrick for Ireland. Whatever is decided, Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip will have plenty of time in the next few weeks to talk it over.

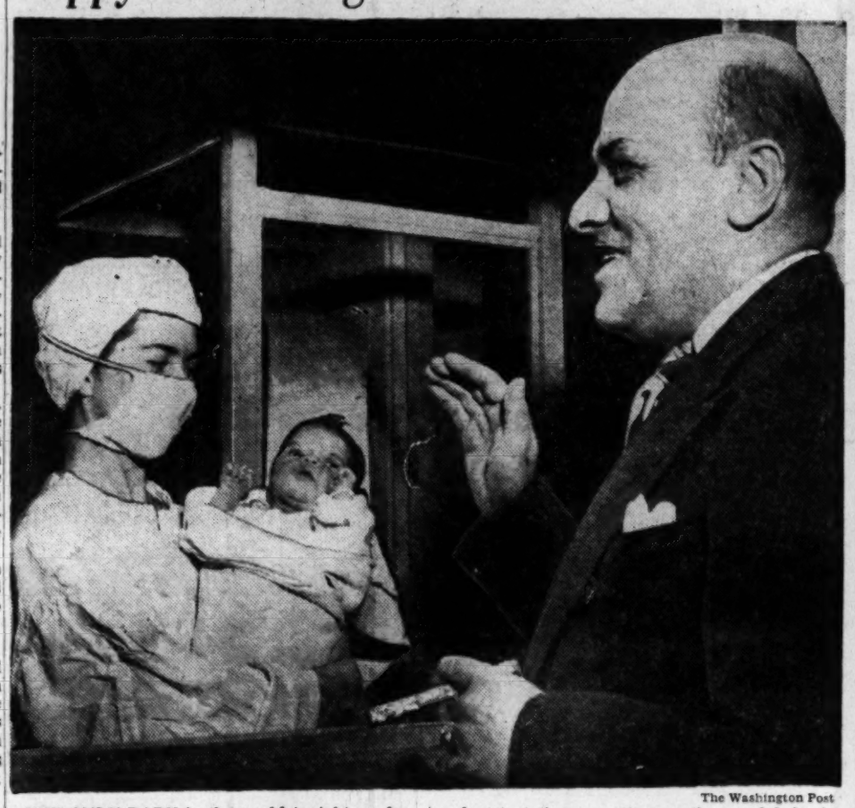
Prince Philip is now temporarily a "gentleman of leisure." He holds a commission as lieutenant in the Royal Navy and was on active duty until October. Then he was placed on half pay at his own request in order to be with his wife during the final weeks of her confinement and for the first six months of next year.

The Princess will be a busy woman during that period. Not only will she have the care of her child but will also be deputizing for her father, who with Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose will leave England for an extended royal tour of Australia and New Zealand.

The King will appoint a council of state, headed by Princess Elizabeth, to rule during his absence. This will require her presence at Buckingham Palace more than usual and will bring on many public appearances at which Prince Philip will accompany her.

So far the next two months the couple will make the most of being just human beings—the parents of their first baby.

Happy as The King . . .



The Washington Post

THE ONLY BABY in the world tonight, as far as Alfred E. Notarianni is concerned is his brand new daughter, Edith, facing her father for the first time, in the arms of Georgetown Hospital Nurse Joan Glancy. Edith was born almost at the same time as the royal baby in London. Notarianni, a Washington attorney of 1430 Longfellow st. nw., wasn't smoking against hospital rules, but he declared his intention to light up as soon as he got outside town Hospital was named Edith, too.

By telephone also the word of little Edith's arrival was spread to Mr. Notarianni's cousins, Mrs. Hugh O. House of 4500 Edmund st., Wesley Heights, and Mrs. Harley Buckingham, 7710 Takoma ave., Takoma Park, and to Mrs. Notarianni's cousin, Mrs. Daniel Pyne, 4701 Colorado ave. nw.

Meanwhile, at the house on Longfellow street, a room with a bassinette adorned with blue and pink ribbons and a crib were ready for Edith. The crib is for later. Toys, too, are yet to come, but blankets and other baby necessities are ready, some new, some left from her brothers.

As for himself, everything was confused in a happy way.

Mr. Notarianni, an attorney associated with Cummings, Stanley, Truitt & Cross, and a member of the District Bar, was born 43 years ago in Johnsonburg, Pa. He came to Washington in 1924 to attend George Washington University, where he received his bachelor of arts degree, and Georgetown University, where he received his bachelor and master of laws degrees.

His wife was born in Washington Christmas Day, 1911. They were married April 30, 1945. He was in the Navy then, assigned to duty in Washington. When he went on inactive duty, in January, 1946, he had served 44 months.

Last night, looking back at the past few hours, he said, "I am glad it is over. You never know."

5000 to Attend Meeting Here of Restaurant Men

With the accent on hospitality and good food, the National Restaurant Association will open its Eighth Southeastern Convention and Exposition November 29* at the Statler Hotel.

More than 5000 persons, including delegates from 31 States, are expected to attend the four-day convention highlighted by an exhibit of 100 food and equipment items, and a competitive event at which chefs will vie in presenting pies, pastries, wedding cakes and salads.

A keynote speaker will be Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post, who will discuss prospects for the food industry in 1949.

The Washington Restaurant Association will be host to the delegates. Convention arrangements are being made by Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary.

Relief Load in U. S. Jumps Upward in Spite of Prosperity

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—In the midst of the postwar prosperity boom, the Nation's relief load has vaulted upward.

The number of actual cases has increased 54 per cent in the last three years, from 232,000 to 358,000, while costs have jumped 136 per cent, from $6,600,000 to $15,600,000 a month.

The American Municipal Association today attributed this gain to inflation, unemployment among unskilled workers displaced by skilled war veterans, and migration of many families to different parts of the Nation, causing temporary family emergencies.

However, relief cases and costs still are far behind those in the period just before the war. In February, 1940, a monthly payment of $14,500,000 was made to 1,687,000 families.

Dean of Canterbury Delighted at News

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the dean of Canterbury, expressed delight today when informed of the birth of a son to Princess Elizabeth.

"We are all very delighted to hear of the birth of a son, though I would be quite happy had it been a daughter, because in England we have a very fine tradition of queens," he said.

The dean arrived Friday for a lecture tour of this country.

Eire Hails New Prince On Date of Revolt

Dublin, Eire, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—The people of Eire took time off tonight from the celebration of the 150th anniversary of a revolt against Britain to toast the health of a possible future British King.

Despite Eire's announced intention to sever all ties with the British crown, Princess Elizabeth's confinement had been followed here with keen interest.

TB Group Sets Meeting

The planning committee of the National Tuberculosis Association yesterday set May 2 to 6 as the date for its 1949 annual meeting in Detroit.

The committee, composed of national authorities on tuberculosis from all parts of the country, met here over the weekend to outline plans for the meeting. Edward K. Funkhouser, executive secretary of the local tuberculosis association, said the theme for the 1949 meeting will be tubercular treatment for patients as individuals.

Speaker on the subject of the conference theme have been selected, Funkhouser said, and will be announced when they accept the association's invitation to speak.

Representatives of the National Tuberculosis Association present at the committee meeting were Dr. Herbert L. Manz, president; Dr. James E. Perkins, managing director, and Ellen Lovell, director of public relations.

Police Guns Stop P-51 on Airstrip

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 14 (AP).—A P-51 fighter plane with a dead pilot in the cockpit roared out of control on a Stout Field runway today until a State policeman blasted its tires with a riot gun.

The pilot, instantly killed in a ground collision with another plane, was Capt. Phillip Bonner, 28, of Indianapolis.

Col. Allison Maxwell, commanding the 122d fighter group of the Indiana National Guard, gave this report:

Captain Bonner's plane was the first of four Mustangs preparing to take off. He started down the runway and then reduced speed for some unknown reason.

Second Lieut. Thomas C. Costin, 23, Indianapolis, followed Captain Bonner at the normal interval and his plane overran the first Mustang. Costin was unhurt. Both planes were damaged and skidded to a stop, but Captain Bonner's plane, minus a wing, started up again and made about 20 circular turns before Trooper Ray Thompson stopped it by shooting off the tires with a riot gun. The bare rims mired down in soft ground.

ty-third Army were annihilated on the eastern bank of the Grand Canal on the 12th and another division, the Forty-fourth of its One-hundredth Army met its doom two days earlier," said the broadcast.

U. S. to Speed Arms Shipments to China

By White House

Admittance Of More DPs To Be Asked

By the United Press

The Administration will urge the new Congress to throw open America's gates to additional homeless Europeans, informed quarters said yesterday.

The last Congress approved admission of 205,000 under a two-year resettlement program. This program is now under way.

There has been no decision yet as to the extent to which Congress will be asked to broaden the program, but there is strong Administration sentiment for seeking authority to admit a total of 400,000 over a four-year period.

Would Care for All

That would assure resettlement of all the 825,000 DP's, since Australia has agreed to "match" the top number admitted by any country, and other nations also are making homes for them.

President Truman last summer signed current DP legislation with reluctance. He said it was inadequate and written in such a way as to discriminate against Jews and Catholics.

Expansion of Program

The new Congress will be asked to expand the present program, remove alleged discriminatory features, and simplify the program's operation.

A State Department "Voice of America" broadcast already has told European listeners that the Democratic-controlled Congress is "likely" to pass legislation raising the quota.

The present program has got off to a slow start, but is scheduled to pick up soon. Thus far, only 813 DP's have been brought in. A second ship carrying 802 is scheduled to dock at Boston Thursday. There will be four more shiploads before the end of the year.

By The Associated Press

The Army and Navy have ordered full speed ahead for American arms shipments to China.

To avoid delays from the West Coast shipping strike or other causes, American Naval and Army vessels will carry weapons, ammunition and military supplies, officials said yesterday.

Many appear deeply pessimistic, however, that the shipments can themselves alter Chinese Nationalist chances of halting the Communist advance, north of Nanking or elsewhere.

The arms, paid for out of the 125 million dollars Congress voted for Chinese military aid, may fall short of replacing those believed lost by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's troops in north China and Manchuria.

Chinese Government Waits Bullitt's Arrival

Shanghai, Nov. 14 (NYHT.).—Its back to the wall, China's Nationalist government awaits with hopeful interest the arrival tomorrow of William C. Bullitt, en route on a fact-finding mission for the congressional "watchdog" committee.

Preliminary discussions are reported in progress here and in Nanking with a view to possible creation of a supreme economic organ within the Chinese government in an effort to bring order out of the present chaos. The proposed body would enjoy a substantial measure of American advice and cooperation.

Dr .T. V. Soong, Governor of Kwantung Province, who is now here for a Governors' conference, is expected to confer with Bullitt on means of alleviating the economic crisis.

A difficult problem facing the Economic Cooperation Administration is the extent to which the aid program should be pushed in areas under imminent threat of Communist invasion. Four shiploads of ECA wheat and flour, totaling 36,000 tons, are scheduled to arrive at the North China port of Tientsin in the first week of December. This food is badly needed in the Tientsin and Peiping area, but there is the risk that the Communists may arrive at about the same time. The present plan is to maintain skeleton staffs in these two North China cities and to try to proceed with the distribution arrangements regardless of the political and military developments. But this depends on Washington's approval.

On the military side, there is little doubt that Bullitt will be under heavy pressure from the government to recommend more and faster American assistance with—if necessary—a larger measure of American advice and supervision. In its present plight, the Nanking regime probably would be willing to go a long way to meet American requirements, however strong.

Israel Balks At U. N. Order

ernment spokesman explained that it would hardly be worth while to name military representatives when the cabinet might well decide upon categorical rejection of the entire order.

The Israeli answer, which will be transmitted in a day or two to Dr. Paul Mohn, the mediator's representative in Tel Aviv, will probably assert that King Abdullah's legion occupied Hebron and Bethlehem because the Egyptians were too weak to hold them and that any withdrawal order should thus include the legion.

2 Parties Snatch Queuille From Disaster

Paris, Nov. 14 (AP).—French Premier Henri Queuille escaped political disaster today—temporarily.

Two of the big parties in his coalition cabinet decided to stick with him, for a little while longer.

The decision was made by national councils of the Socialists and the Catholic, Popular Republican Movement (MRP).

If either party had decided to withdraw the cabinet would probably have collapsed, and Gen. Charles de Gaulle would have been much nearer to taking power.

Both parties, however, posed conditions to Queuille, leader of the cabinet's third main party, the Radical Socialists (a moderate party in spite of the name).

The MRP, which voted, 126 to 28, to keep its ministers in the cabinet, gave Queuille a vague ultimatum.

Queuille, the party said, will have to apply an economic, social and financial policy "assuring a more equitable distribution of resources and sacrifices."

The Socialists were more precise.

They gave Queuille two months in which to either force prices down or consent to periodic wage increases pegged to the rise in the cost of living index.

The Socialists also reiterated demands for a 25 per cent slash in the military budget.

The lukewarm support did little to strengthen Queuille's cabinet on the eve of Parliament's return.

[Returns from the Middle Congo gave the De Gaullists three more seats, according to the United Press. The RPF already had won 123 of the Council's 320 appeared.]

Other unofficial returns from French Africa were: Socialists, seven; Radical Socialists, one; Independents, three; minor parties, six. Fourteen more contests are to be reported.]

Europe Federation Aid Urged by AFL

Cincinnati, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—The AFL executive council tonight urged that foreign aid funds be used "to develop a European economy—not separate economies of various states."

The proposal was made in the council's annual report to be submitted at the opening Monday of the AFL's sixty-seventh convention.

"History makes it plain," the AFL governing body said, "that an essential step in assuring peace in Europe is federation. Customs barriers on all state boundaries, separate economies and provisions for defense have been an excessive drain on all European states."

"Strong Forces" Noted

The AFL said it was aware of the "strong historic forces" favoring separate European states. But, it said, a western European federation of free nations is the best way of "safeguarding democratic institutions and in checking plans to impose communism on other countries."

Germany and Austria must be included in these recovery plans, the AFL said. It said that "through Russian control of Germany, the Communists figure they can smash the European recovery plan and seize the continent."

The AFL said it will fight not only to prevent "advancement of the iron curtain westward" but will work with an eastern European trade union federation in exile to maintain contact with free trade unionists behind the iron curtain.

The executive council suggested establishment of an AFL Asiatic bureau to work with free trade unions against Communist control of governments in Japan, India, Pakistan, China and Burma.

It pledged continued help for the non-Communist trade unions of Greece, Italy, Germany and South American countries.

Week's Grants by ECA Total $263,345,203

By the United Press

ECA announced yesterday that it made recovery authorizations totaling $263,345,203 for the week ending November 10, including $23,277,000 for Communist-ridden China.

Industrial, rather than food items, were accented in the week's grants to Austria, Belgium, Bizone Germany, Denmark, France, the French Zone of Germany, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Trieste, the United Kingdom and China.

The authorizations were for commodities and raw materials such as tobacco, cotton, machinery, equipment, petroleum, lumber and sawmill products as well as foodstuffs. Industrial authorizations accounted for $133,683,539 of the total grants, and food and agriculture items were $103,449,079, or 44 per cent of the total expended.

France, with total grants for the week of $149,399,929, led all western European recovery nations in aid received. She also remains in top place on total authorizations. Up to last Wednesday, she had received $797,184,041 in ECA aid. Britain is in second place with total grants of $632,244,347. Italy is a low third, with grants of $314,300,443, and Bizone Germany is fourth, with $279,112,800.

Tsaldaris Starts Work On Cabinet

Athens, Nov. 14 (AP).—Constantin Tsaldaris, leader of the Populist Party, said tonight he is attempting to form a new government.

He added the new cabinet, if formed, would not include former Premier Themistokles Sophoulis, who resigned Friday because of a split in his own Liberal Party.

Tsaldaris, former Premier and Foreign Minister in Sophoulis' coalition government, said Sophoulis had told King Paul I he does not want to participate in the new cabinet because he wants to reorganize the Liberals.

Tsaldaris began an immediate attempt to line up cabinet ministers from former opposition parties. His own Populist Party is the largest in Parliament.

Tsaldaris said Sophoulis had not only declined to participate in a new government but also had refused to permit any of his followers in the Liberal Party to take part.

Barring a change of mind by Sophoulis, this means an end of the coalition of Populists and Liberals.

French Zone Citizens Elect Local Officials

Stuttgart, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Citizens of the French Zone of Germany went to the polls today to choose town and district governments.

Early returns showed an increase of strength for both the Liberal and Democratic Peoples parties. Returns for the Christian Democratic Party showed a sharp slump from last year. The Communist Party (KPD) received 8 to 10 per cent of the early ballots.

15,000 Belgian Reds Parade

Brussels, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Fifteen thousand Belgian Communists paraded through Brussels in a show of force today, shouting anti-American slogans and demands that Premier Paul Henri Spaak resign.

Some 400 policemen lined the procession route, but no incidents were reported. A high Communist source said every Belgian Communist had been "ordered" to show up for today's parade. The demonstration had been planned originally as a recruiting drive to enlarge the party ranks and raise money to build a new Communist publishing house.

North Atlantic Pact Delay Is Expected

Britain Asks Talk on Berlin

not to all four of the countries involved.

Today, while the United Nations was facing a week in which the problem of Palestine probably also will come to a new head of complication, British delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan was armed with a fresh Berlin proposition for Secretary of State George C. Marshall and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

The proposition was, it was understood, that on Tuesday a high level conference be held among the three powers to determine the detail of a joint attitude toward the Lie-Evatt appeal. At such a conference, Britain would be represented by Hector McNeil, British Minister of State.

It appeared that the likely backbone of the Western power attitude would be the contention that the West refuses to negotiate with Russia under the duress of the Berlin blockade, and that the Security Council is still seized of the matter.

In addition, it is understood, the West prefers to pin what small hopes there are of reaching a Berlin solution on the conciliation work of Juan Atilio Bramuglia, Argentine president of the Security Council, rather than on such gestures as the Lie-Evatt appeal.

Although the Lie-Evatt appeal was a well-meant and idealistic endeavor, as a matter of practical and hard realism it was displeasing to the West, and probably strengthened the feeling of some of the big countries that the secretary general and the assembly president should stick to administration and stay out of high-powered delegation politics.

By the United Press

American officials predicted yesterday that the projected North Atlantic security treaty will not be ready for Senate ratification before eary February. They had hoped to present it in January, soon after the new Congress convenes.

The pact would link the defenses of the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and other western European nations in a common front against aggression.

Factors indicating the timetable will be moved back are listed by planners as the delay of the ambassadors of the five European nations in resuming preliminary talks here, ensuing meetings with other nations, and the possibility of a final drafting conference taking up several weeks. Between each phase will be additional meetings with President Truman and congressional leaders.

State Department officials hope that the five ambassadors will be able to resume conversations here this week with Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett.

One of the major problems to be discussed is whether to ask Iceland, Norway, Denmark, Portugal, Ireland and Italy to become charter signatories of the treaty. American authorities hope that these nations can be persuaded to join, although restrictions of the Italian peace treaty are expected to make Italy's cooperation impossible.

Extent of American military support of the alliance also must be worked out. At present, defense officials believe United States supplemental arms for the signatory nations may cost up to two billion dollars for the first year. The armament program will require action by both houses of Congress. Final action on this part of the project and the parallel treaty is not expected until mid-1949.

35,000 Install Huge Base For Airlift

Burtonwood Airfield, England, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—An army of Air Force engineers, working with scores of cranes and bulldozers and hundreds of trucks and jeeps, today finished transforming this mammoth airbase into an assembly line to keep the Berlin airlift flying.

Thirty-five thousand hand-picked officers and men have worked at top speed to turn this 40-square mile former Royal Air Force depot into a service station for American planes on the Berlin run. Tomorrow, the first crippled planes will roll in. In 72 hours, virtually rebuilt, they will be loaded with supplies and winging over the Berlin blockade.

The Burtonwood assembly line will operate like this:

"Taxi pilots" will pick up ailing C-54 Skymasters in the American zone of Germany and fly them here.

Tractors will nose the four-engine transports into one end of a ...ter mile of hangars where teams of engineers, mechanics, ...icians and radio technicians will start them through an intensive checkup system recently perfected by the United States Air Force.

The planes will come out clean and mechanically perfect. They will be flown to German bases to go back into the grinding day and night Berlin shuttle.

months was a major. He came with his wife.

Most of the deserters are a nuisance. As one authority put it:

"What can we do with them? The Germans in the western zones don't want anything to do with them. If enough gather in the same commu ity they naturally band together and right there you have the start of at least a local problem."

Some "Deserters" Lucky

The luckiest "deserter" of all is the Russian who just gets drunk and stumbles around western Berlin. He is bundled up and driven back to the Soviet sector. Chances are his commanding officer never will know about it.

Most of them fall into that category. The Russian plays hard and joyously, though somewhat savage in his humor.

They havan odd attitude toward American soldiers who get lost and wind up in their tolls. They always see something sinister in that.

O'Dwyer to Begin Dock Talks Today

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Conferences begin Monday in an effort to end a dock workers' strike which has halted nearly all overseas shipments from the Nation's big East Coast ports.

Mayor William O'Dwyer said today he will confer Monday with Joseph P. Ryan, head of the striking AFL International Longshoremen's Association. A total of 65,000 ILA members are out in a pay dispute.

O'Dwyer, successful in negotiating many a strike settlement, is primarily concerned with the 15,000 longshoremen in New York. But any settlement also would affect the ports of Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Wilmington, Del., and Hampton Roads, Va.

Yesterday the Association of American Railroads placed a ban on nearly all goods bound for overseas from these ports. About 200 ships are tied up as a result of the strike. If it lasts long, Marshall Plan shipments as well as ordinary commercial maritime business will be hard hit.

O'Dwyer said today the city's food and fuel are not at present endangered by the strike.

A few hours earlier he arrived here by plane after cutting short a vacation at the home of his brother Frank, at El Centro, Calif. It was the sixth time a strike in New York had jinxed a vacation for him.

O'Dwyer offered the full cooperation of the city to the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, which is keeping a close eye on the situation.

Federal mediators got the longshoremen and ship owners together last week after a rank-and-file vote by ILA members rejected a 10-cent-an-hour increase offered by the employers. However, the employers refused to raise their offer.

A Federal spokesman said today he believed union and employers' spokesmen might be brought together again later this week.

The agreement reached between union officers and employers, which was rejected by a membership vote, called for a raise in day shift straight-time pay from $1.75 to $1.85 and hour. Under the proposal the night and overtime rate would have been increased from $2.62½ to $2.77½.

Ryan says the union now seeks a 50-cent-an-hour increase—its original demand.

AFL Council Calls For Old Wagner Act

Cincinnati, Nov. 14 (AP).—Swift repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and automatic substitution of the old Wagner Labor Relations Act was proposed today by the American Federation of Labor Executive Council.

President William Green told a news conference that he thought repeal could be accomplished by March 1.

Officials Seek to Avert 7-State Bus Tieup

San Francisco, Nov. 14 (AP).—Weary negotiators took a respite early today in their eleventh-hour efforts to avert a tie-up of Pacific Greyhound bus lines in seven Western States at midnight Sunday.

Federal Conciliator Omar Hoskins said he had "no comment" as officials of the company and the AFL bus drivers came out of a 15-hour session. Negotiations were scheduled to resume later in the day.

Kaiser Urges Public Power Increase

By James M. Minifie

Henry J. Kaiser, industrialist and automobile maker, called yesterday for a greatly increased program of public power development in the interests of national defense.

He declared that but for the great public power developments at Bonneville, Boulder, and other sites which were condemned as "pork-barrel" at the time they were being built, "this country would be suffering tremendously from lack of basic materials today."

Kaiser gave his views when queried on the announcement yesterday by the Federal Works Agency and the Munitions Board that the aluminum reduction plant at Riverbank, Calif., is being offered for sale or lease, "in an effort to relieve the national shortage of aluminum."

The plant is one of 12 industrial facilities which recently were transferred from Government surplus to the National Industrial Reserve to be placed in stand-by status. It was built during the war to produce 108 million pounds of aluminum a year. Restoration of the plant to full production would add about 8 per cent to American output of aluminum, vital in the production of aircraft.

Kaiser revealed his corporation had been studying the Riverbank project from time to time.

"But the problem is getting kilowatts," he said, "and getting them at the proper price."

"There are any number of possibilities in the country that could give power," Kaiser said. "But they need Government support. Kilowatts are a basic commodity, but they take a tremendous amount of money to produce. And private risk capital doesn't seem to be coming forward.

Condon Favors More Probing

the committee came as a drive was developing among some Democrats to abolish the group when the Eighty-first Congress convenes. Representatives Emanual Celler (D., N. Y.) and Walter B. Huber (D., Ohio) have announced they lead a fight to eliminate the 10-year-old investigating body.

The committee assailed Condon in a report made public last March 1 as "one of the weakest links in our atomic security."

Condon immediately protested and demanded that he be given a chance to clear his name at public hearings. Eight and one half months have elapsed since the charges were made but the committee has never held public hearings.

Representative John C. Wood (D., Ga.), who is scheduled to become committee chairman, told the United Press by telephone from his home in Canton, Ga., that he feels Condon is entitled to a hearing and that he would recommend such action early next year.

While indicating that he feels his treatment at the hands of the committee under Thomas' leadership was something less than fair, Condon said he had no desire to indulge in bitter recriminations.

He noted, however, that "many thoughtful persons have made a good many suggestions about ways in which the work of the committee could be better handled."

Without referring directly to his personal experiences, he said desirable "reform" might include:

1. "Provision that no individual would be the subject of public accusations against him without having been given a previous opportunity to know about such accusations so that he could answer them at once." (Condon was first informed of the committee's charges against him by reporters, after the charges had been distributed to the press.)

2. "The assurance of promptly held hearings conducted in a sober judicial atmosphere."

3. At the hearings, the accused should have "the right of being represented by counsel, of presenting witnesses on their own behalf, and of briefly cross-examining witnesses who testify against them."

Md. U. Must Admit Negroes, Byrd Says

formed of his appointment as general inaugural chairman.

Hildreth promised an inaugural parade which will "last for hours" and predicted "the great spectacle" would attract more than a million visitors to the National Capital.

He said possibly today he would begin naming chairmen of the 30 or so committees to work under him.

"It is not only a tremendous honor but a great privilege," he said of his general chairmanship appointment. "This inauguration will be one of great historical significance."

As to appointing Republicans as well as Democrats to his committees, he said he regarded the inauguration "as a District-wide affair" and not a political matter.

A former president of the Circus Fans Association of America—an organization of lay followers of the Big Top—Hildreth himself has a flare for show business, which should stand him good for his January 20 duties.

He was in charge of grandstand arrangements for three inaugurations of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and has made a study of all past inaugurations. At the time he was informed of his appointment last night, he said he was reading a report on President Woodrow Wilson's second inauguration.

Hildreth said he planned to invite the United States Military Academy at West Point and other service organizations to participate in the inaugural procession. He noted that January 20 will be the West Point anniversary.

"This will be our first real inauguration in many years," he said. "I notice that the parade when Woodrow Wilson was inaugurated the second time lasted until after 5 p. m. We are going to have a long one, too."

President H. C. Byrd of the University of Maryland believes "Negroes must be admitted to the university," although he adds "it would be disastrous to have them come into College Park under present conditions."

He suggests a method which he termed "controlled segregation" for intergrating Negro and white students at the university. He did not explain what he meant by the term. At present there are no Negro students at College Park.

Byrd's statements were made yesterday during a pre-football game meeting with a group of Maryland legislators.

When one legislator asked what he meant by "controlled segregation," Byrd said he would be glad to go into the sujbect at some future time.

Byrd said he believes "Negro and white work should be integrated at the university," adding that "it can be done in such a way as to meet objections."

"Negroes, he said, "have got to get University of Maryland diplomas."

The university president said he opposed a proposal to transfer Princess Anne Ayricultural College for Negroes from his jurisdiction to Morgan State College for Negroes.

"It would be utterly impossible," he added, "for a Negro institution to develop work equivalent to or equal in any sense to the work of the University of Maryland."

Fliers Stage Mock Raid

Nearly 150 bombers and fighter planes zoomed over Washington yesterday in a mock attack on Bolling Field.

The attack had been postponed from Armistice Day because of bad flying weather. Participants in yesterday's fake battle were two Air Guard wings, the Fifty-fifth, with headquarters in Columbus, Ohio, and the Fifty-third, based in Harrisburg, Pa.

Fighter planes of F-47 and F-51 types, and B-26 medium bombers flew in the raid. Planes of the 121st Fighter Squadron, based at Andrews Field, planed off from Andrews to intercept the attacking force. The interception was scored as a successful defense of the field.

The 121st was joined by the 104th from Baltimore, and the 149th from Richmond, in the mock combat. Then the fighter units led both wings in an aerial review over Constitution ave., flying at 3000 feet. All participating planes landed at Andrews Feld yesterday after the mock battle before returning to their home bases.

The fighter and bomber attacking units from points in Ohio were intercepted along their route by Air National Guard fighter units in Harrisburg, York and Annapolis.

Noted Artist, Wife Slain

Boca Raton, Fla., Nov. 14 (AP).—Leno Lazzari, ranked as one of America's best decorative sculptors, and his wife, were found murdered and robbed in their studio-home today.

Police Chief W. H. Brown said the bodies were discovered shortly after 1 p. m. (Eastern standard time) by a friend who was to have been a dinner guest. They had been shot with a rifle or revolver, Lazzari once and Mrs. Lazzari twice, both through the stomach.

The bodies were sprawled on the floor, 7 or 8 feet apart. Lazzari's pockets had been emptied and Mrs. Lazzari's purse was missing, although their watches were still on their wrists.

Lazzari's "Rainbow Figure" was sold to the Duke of Windsor for the Governor's Mansion in Nassau, Bahamas.

Citizens' Meetings to Air Playground Issue

The current controversy over control of 62 playgrounds in the District will be a topic of discussion at two meetings of citizens' groups this week.

They are the Northeast Washington Citizens Association, which meets at 8 p. m. Tuesday at Edmunds School, 9th and D sts. ne., and the Capitol View Civic Association, meeting at 8 p. m .today at Richardson Elementary School, 53d and Ames sts. ne.

The point at issue in the controversy is whether use of the playgrounds is legally under control of the Federal Government, through the National Park Service, or the District Government, through the Recreation Department. The Park Service does not practice segregation in the areas it controls, while the local department does. The question of control is before the Attorney General for decision.

Royal Baby

The birth of a son to Princess Elizabeth has brought the British another happy interlude to lighten their grim daily living. About a year ago they and much of the world escaped into a field day of romance as with traditional pomp and splendor the princess, heiress presumptive to the throne, became the bride of Prince Philip. Now a royal heir in direct line to be a future King of England, first grandchild of King George and Queen Elizabeth, has been ushered into the world with modern obstetrics and greeted by centuries-old fanfare.

The news-"It's a boy!" will add to the zest of the celebration. For even though Britain knew its greatest achievements and glory under two queens, Elizabeth and Victoria, and though another presumptive queen, the Princess Elizabeth, is in the offing, it has yet been 54 years since the British hailed in the birth of the present Duke of Windsor a male heir to the throne. Moreover, the deeply ingrained habit of giving a little lustier welcome to a royal heir than a royal heiress hangs on among all peoples.

Now that suspense over the royal infant's sex has ended—and this time the predictions of the dopesters and gossips came true—the British can sit back, relax and enjoy having a "baby in the house." Plenty of sentimental gratification still lies ahead—over the name to be chosen; over the christening with water from the River Jordan, a custom of the royal family since the time of the Crusades, over the bestowing of a title by the King. There will be national furor over the first photograph and the first public appearance. There will be unending debate as to which side of the house the baby "takes after." And there will be on a nation-wide scale the usual smiling, clucking and cooing, the softening of hearts and of faces, and the lift of spirit that comes to all grown-ups even in an uncertain world as with ever-recurrent hope they welcome an innocent and unsullied newcomer to their midst.

Displaced Germans

When the Allies moved into conquered Germany and Austria they found some 7,580,000 people of other nationalities who had been forcibly taken to Germany as laborers or were held in concentration camps. Of these "displaced persons" less than a million now remain to be resettled. Numerically, thus, the problem of Europe's homeless millions would appear to have been largely solved. But the appearance is a semantic deception, as the National Planning Association's study of "The Role of Uprooted People in European Recovery" amply demonstrates. The fact is that in Germany alone there are some 13.5 million Germans dislodged from their previous homes during or since the war but who do not come within the technical definition of "displaced persons."

The smaller proportion are the so-called "evacuees" who were bombed out or removed for military purposes and are unable to return to their former homes. They number near four million. The greater part are called "expellees" and "refugees." These include Germans (Reichsdeutsch) formerly resident in eastern German areas or in neighboring countries who have been expelled by or have fled from the new regimes in eastern Europe and people of perhaps distant German origin who lived outside Germany. The latter are the Volksdeutsch about whom Hitler made a great fuss and for whose reunification with the Fatherland he called the Reich to fight. They are the core of the problem now.

The Germans at home, on whom these 9.5 million uprooted people have descended, find them undesirable newcomers who compete for scarce food, clothing, and housing. Inasmuch as they are Germans, the IRO cannot take care of them. The job has been handed over to the Germans themselves. The result is that these people have become a hindrance to economic recovery in Germany. Destitute and unwanted, they do not produce as much as they consume. And given the German inability and disinclination to take care of them, the situation is not improving very rapidly.

One consequence is a drain on the American pocketbook. We must provide food and clothing and housing, such as it is, for them. This is a direct cost. Indirectly, the fact that they are not contributing as much as they might to European recovery likewise adds a burden. In the long run the second factor is by far the more important. The European Recovery Program is beset with difficulties enough without letting this particular millstone hang around its neck any longer than necessary.

The ultimate solution is not easy to see. But the present situation can be improved. The military government authorities are, in effect, the only agents who can take—or require the Germans to take—the necessary actions. Military government, it seems to us, could well move more forcefully than it is now doing to require the assimilation of some of these displaced Germans into the country's social and economic life.

New Hope On Berlin

The appeal from President Evatt of the United Nations General Assembly and Trygve Lie, Secretary General, urging the big powers to get together and settle the Berlin dispute, reflects a powerful sentiment for peace among the U. N. delegates at Paris. Pressure is coming especially from the small nations within striking distance of Soviet Russia that would be forced to choose between that country and the United States in the event of hostilities. But it is also much wider than that. A war-weary world, including the United States and, we suspect, a vast majority of the Russian people, is hoping desperately to avoid any fresh resort to slaughter. This attitude was pointedly manifested two weeks ago when the Assembly unanimously adopted the Mexican resolution asking the big powers to hasten the complete restoration of peace.

There are some indications that the Kremlin would be glad to retreat from its threatening Berlin policy if it could do so without too much loss of face. It is not to be supposed that the masters of Moscow have been softened by the humanitarian sentiments expressed in Paris and elsewhere. But they must have been impressed by the failure of their Berlin policy. They had hoped to drive the Western powers out of Berlin and to humiliate them in the eyes of all Europe. Instead, they have brought the Western powers together in a common policy and intensified their determination to remain in the former German capital. It is the Russians themselves who have lost prestige. They have nothing but frantic propaganda to match against the solid achievement of the Marshall Plan, the airlift and the movement toward an Atlantic defense pact. And while their Berlin policy has imposed acute hardships on the people of that city, the Russians, too, have been hurt by the counter-blockade which prevents steel, coal and industrial goods from moving across the line into the Russian zone.

Mr. Vishinsky's latest accusation that the United States is preparing a "Pearl Harbor" for Russia indicates that the propaganda blitz is still going strong. But even in this field there seem to be hints that Moscow would like to get the Berlin dispute settled. Stalin's interview in Pravda two weeks ago and the more recent Tass dispatch printed by all Moscow papers, quoting a Washington columnist who thinks that President Truman is in a mood for a heart-to-heart talk with Stalin, seem to indicate that the Kremlin would like to have another chance to talk over the Berlin problem.

While these straws in the wind may prove to be nothing more than that, they have apparently encouraged U. N. officials to believe that the Berlin controversy can be settled. Actually the disputants are not far apart. Russia has agreed to lift the blockade—after an agreement on use of Soviet currency in all Berlin has been reached. The Western powers have agreed to the use of Russian currency in Berlin, under four-power supervision, and are ready to negotiate on the details as soon as the blockade is lifted. If the Russians now show evidence of good faith and are ready to eliminate duress in fact from the conference table, the United States, too, can afford to make concessions. The aim of the policy to which the democratic powers clings must necessarily be peace and justice rather than mere saving of face.

Labor Law Report

Even if the Democratic majority in control of the new Congress fulfills party pledges to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act, some substitute measure will have to be enacted. So interest really centers on the nature and extent of the changes contemplated in existing legislation. Whether those changes are brought about through repeal of the present act and substitution of a new one or in the form of revisions may be important from the viewpoint of political strategy, but is otherwise immaterial.

Regardless of which course is taken, the drafting of new labor legislation will be an arduous proceeding that will call for dispassionate weighing of evidence as to the defects and the merits of the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act. The outgoing Congress, knowing that revision of the act would probably be necessary, set up a joint congressional committee to study the administration and operation of the labor laws and make recommendations as to changes. That committee was headed by Senator Ball, who was defeated in the election, and had as its vice chairman Representative Hartley who did not stand for reelection. Since Republicans are in the majority, moreover, the influence of the committee has suffered severely as a result of the Republican defeat.

Nevertheless, there is still a chance that the committee's labors will not be entirely futile. Although the date for submission of its final report originally due in January was extended to March 1 at the last special session of Congress, it is understood that the material is already in shape awaiting the final touches. Probably minority members of the committee (which if its life is extended will be headed by Senator Murray, an outspoken foe of the Taft-Hartley Act), will be ready with a minority report. But at least Congress and the public ought to have the views of the men who have made a special study of this complicated problem.

Professed advocates of repeal concede the necessity for stronger legislation to deal with emergency situations and favor suppression of certain types of unfair practices banned by the Taft-Hartley Act. Congress greatly needs the help of such liberal-minded students of labor-management relations as Senator Ives, who is a member of the Joint Congressional Committee, in formulating a plan of action that will serve the best interests of the country. Assuming that the incoming Congress really wants improved labor legislation it cannot afford to reject the assistance of informed, experienced members, who, regardless of party affiliations, are able to give it constructive advice.

Government Red Tape

Jerry Kluttz's hard-hitting account of the plight of the young widow of a civilian employe of the Army who had to wait 10 months before receiving her husband's final pay check and hasn't yet received a dollar from the Veterans' Administration on a $10,000 insurance policy has brought prompt response from an unexpected source—the President of the United States. After reading the story Mr. Truman requested Secretary Forrestal and Veterans' Administrator Gray to make an immediate investigation and suggest measures to prevent similar intolerable delays in other cases. What's more, the VA suddenly discovered that it was possible to cut through red tape and make a first payment immediately on the insurance policy.

The publicity given to Mrs. Power's experience will probably do more to bring about reforms in procedure in dealing with dependents of deceased Federal employes than any number of weighty impersonal critiques of administrative methods. Mrs. Power herself evidently appreciates the fact that her case is only one among many. For with a thoughtfulness and restraint that does credit to her high intelligence and public spirit she says that she doesn't mind being "a guinea pig", if it will help others in a similar situation.

A certain amount of delay in validating and paying claims against the Government is unavoidable. But prolonged delays cannot be defended on such grounds; they are the result of defective organization, incompetence of personnel, or poor judgment, and are therefore remediable. Mrs. Power has called attention to the fact that there is no one place or one person who knows how to handle all the forms required in making rather complicated settlements in cases like hers. And Jerry Kluttz has emphasized the need of immediate death benefits for families of Federal workers who die in the service. Interim aid of this kind is often desperately needed to tide families deprived of their breadwinners over even a short waiting period while insurance and other claims are being adjusted. Not only administrative changes but legislative action is required to provide a decent measure of protection for the dependents of employes of the Government.

For "Lame Ducks"

No complete list of members of Congress eligible for pensions under the retirement system enacted in 1946 is available, although the names of House members applying for participation was published in January, 1947. Secrecy was imposed following protests from some legislators on the list; and the Civil Service Commission has refused to divulge the names of beneficiaries on the ground that it is forbidden by law to do so. However, a large number of House members who have retired or were defeated at the last election are on the partial list made public last year. Some of these men have reached advanced ages and have long years of service to their credit. It is a satisfaction to know that all of them who are 62 years of age or over will be in a position to draw modest pensions based on the minimum term of service, while some with long terms of service will enjoy ample pensions if they are prepared to make moderate lump sum contributions to the pension fund. The younger men who have qualified will, of course have to wait until they reach the age limit.

This pension system serves a double purpose: it helps to overcome the reluctance of able men to enter political life and makes it easier for veteran politicians to retire voluntarily when old age or physical disabilities overtake them. To be sure, there are always some men who become so habituated to the excitement and intangible rewards of public life that material considerations do not influence them. Then the voters have to be relied upon to separate them from their jobs when their powers fail. That separation can be much more easily brought about if the electorate knows that men who have served them well in the past are in a position to spend their declining years in comfort, instead of being compelled to take up employment for which they are no longer fitted.

The patent advantages of pensioning former members of Congress are so obvious that there is no good reason for beneficiaries of the system to conceal their participation. The mistaken idea that there is something discreditable about a congressional pension system is an unfortunate holdover from the early war years when a pension act aroused so much public indignation that it was hastily repealed. Since then wiser second thoughts have prevailed. And we hope the day is not far distant when the pension rolls of Congress will come to be regarded as honor rolls rather than lists to be kept from prying eyes.

Atomic War

"R. R.," in answering on October 23 your editorial, "Democracy and Atomic War," of October 17 says that the atomic bomb is the decisive factor in war, and that therefore we must either use it without limitation or forget about it entirely.

Does not R. R. know that today's struggle is for the minds and souls of men—a battle of ideas, carried on by many means more persuasive than military force? Do ideas cease when armies surrender? Can they be killed by force or terror? Or can they best be fought—and armies themselves weakened—by better ideas?

The ideas with which we are at war exist not alone in Russia, but in every land, including our own. They exist in embryo in the minds of incredibly large percentages of the population of every nation. Whether these embryo thoughts grow or lie dormant in these millions depends mainly on the economic health and the moral health of the society.

We can perhaps win one of the military phases of this continuing war of ideas by the indiscriminate slaughter of civilians and the ruin of the productive mechanisms of entire nations. But in the process we shall destroy the means of economic health in the world, and more important we shall destroy in millions of individuals in every nation, including our own, the faith in principles of justice and humanity which more than any other factor restrains the growth of the Communist idea in the minds of individuals.

In the war of yesterday, as defined by the rigid military mind which isolates mechanical force from ideological force, the atom bomb may perhaps be decisive. But in the total war to which we are now committed beyond escape the only decisive weapon is sustained moral force.

I did not understand the editorial to say that we should not under any circumstances use atomic bombs. It said we must restrain our use of them in such a way as best to preserve our ability to exert moral force. It meant to say, I suspect, that we should use atomic bombs against the military instruments of oppression, but not against the victims of oppression. ISAIAH.

Roller Polo

Washington appears to be waking up athletically, with the advent of the six-day bike race and the announcement of "roller hockey" soon. The bike event will probably be sportscasted by a football "expert," chronically and blissfully unacquainted with what is going on along the track, judging by past performances. This, of course, will popularize bike contests in the District of Columbia.

As a former roller-polo player, permit me to smile broadly at the sportscasters and reporters latest designation for this sport: "roller hockey." The previous reportorial heading was "hockey on roller skates." Roller polo was the parent form of hockey not played in the field, and goes back over 70 years in this country. It had its biggest boom in the roller-skating days, when there were roller rinks all over the United States. It was mostly an amateur sport, but the pros invaded the field and folded up when the craze for rollers died down. There are still places where roller-polo is played today, by amateurs.

It is to be hoped that the oddities of ice hockey, such as colored lines and penalty boxes, will not muck up roller-polo. And that the rule against spiked axleends had better be put into action right now, before the rinks are torn up and gashed.

Truman's Prosperity

In your November 5 issue there appeared a letter to the editor from Ewing Cockrell claiming that "Truman was big enough, despite complex world forces, to produce for the American people the greatest prosperity in any three peacetime years of any nation in the history of the world."

Surely Mr. Cockrell will not repeat the well-worn mistake of attributing postwar well-being to the Administration in power. No matter how well Mr. Truman means, or how good a President he has been, it is my opinion that any President of any party in office in this country after this last great war would have "achieved" for us the same great prosperity.

Truly, "in his term of office there has come to Americans the greatest abundance of material good things that ever came in years of peace to any people on earth," and that is lucky for Mr. Truman, but hardly the result of "Truman's leadership," but rather of conditions beyond Mr. Truman's able control.

King George Schools

Governor Tuck's implication that cement, mortar and school buses are not needed for education indicates that he believes Virginia students can walk possibly 5 miles to attend school in a ramshackle building that is drafty, poorly lighted, without indoor toilets and otherwise unhealthy and still be psychologically ready to learn subject content. I daresay that under such conditions the absentee rate is so high that very little if any learning is accomplished. I grant that Governor Tuck has a problem in financing separate but equal school facilities.

In considering a solution I contend that the Governor should consider the gravity of the problem of inadequate education as concerns our national security. In America the persons who are most susceptible to subversive propaganda are those who do not know what our democracy means.

A setting like the one described above is not the best for expounding the advantages of living in a democracy. Further, a democracy cannot hope to survive unless all of its members are educated to such a degree that they may take an active, intelligent part in their government. Is segregation so dear that Governor Tuck is willing to do anything to preserve it, even if it means an eventual end to our democratic form of government? JEHU C. HUNTER.

Taft-Hartley In The Election

Elisha Friedman's letter of November 9 maintains that the recent election returns are anything but a mandate to repeal Taft-Hartley. According to what returns are available, the holes in his cloth are obvious even to a layman.

"Apparently the election returns were not studied," he states. "Of Governor Dewey's 189 electoral votes, 140 came from the following industrialized States: Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania." Apparently Mr. Friedman has overlooked the fact that the Progressive Party, running on a platform of total repeal of Taft-Hartley, carried far more votes than the Republican margin of victory in three of these States: Michigan, New York, and Maryland; and reduced this Republican victory margin in Connecticut to an uncomfortable 2628 out of a total 873,824 votes cast. Deprived of these four States, in the face of a combined "anti-Taft-Hartley" vote, Dewey's electoral votes would have been cut from 189 to 105.

"The only industrialized States," he continues, "that voted for President Truman were those which have a relatively higher rural population . . . such as Illinois and Ohio . . ." The heavily industrialized States of Massachusetts, Wisconsin, and Rhode Island have been ignored, not to mention the fringe States of Texas, California, and Washington—all of which fit the anti-Taft-Hartley category.

As for the "relatively higher rural population" of Illinois and Ohio, the ratio of factory to agricultural workers in these two States is approximately 3 to 1, and in Republican New Hampshire 3 to 1; in Republican Pennsylvania 4 to 1, New Jersey 10 to 1, and in Democratic Massachusetts 10 to 1. In Republican Delaware and Maine there are less factory than agricultural workers, but in Democratic Rhode Island the ratio is 20 to 1. Indiana remained Republican with almost as many farmers as factory workers; Ohio went Democratic with more factory workers; Oregon went Republican with more factory workers; Wisconsin went Democratic with more farmers. This line of thought leads nowhere.

It is accurate that Dewey received more "popular votes in 1948 than in 1944 in Delaware Connecticut and Pennsylvania." However, in both Delaware and Connecticut, the combined anti-Taft-Hartley vote approximates the 1944 Roosevelt vote (certainly a good criterion for a "labor" vote), while the Republican vote increased enough to carry the States.

In other words, when the Wallace and Truman votes are added together, they equal the votes cast for Roosevelt in 1944. The labor vote remained static. So it would seem that the votes that won these States for Dewey crept out of a purely Republican closet. The only industrial States in the country that demonstrate any serious political realignment are Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

A more accurate indication of what mandate came out of this election is a comparison in Mr. Friedman's home State, New York, with the 1946 senatorial returns. The Republican vote in 1944 was 2,987,647. In 1946 it dropped about 300,000, and in this election it went back up 200,000. This is relatively stable.

But the total Roosevelt vote of 3,298,238 in 1944 dropped over one million in 1946. This at a time when Taft-Hartley was only an incipient threat, not a fact. And in this election, with Taft-Hartley a fact, the combined anti-Taft-Hartley vote climbed to 3,300,274—exceeding the '44 Roosevelt vote. This performance of a labor bloc is repeated in most of our key States.

It is open to conjecture whether the magnetic personality of Mr. Truman, the burning issues of Taft-Hartley and prices, or the pressure of Henry Wallace produced an anti-Republican turnout at the polls, but no amount of twisting can put Truman out of office. Mr. Friedman should not let his seemingly "reactionary" sympathies color the facts.

Old Sayed Saws

THE OXFORD DICTIONARY OF ENGLISH PROVERBS; compiled by William George Smith; introduction by Janet E. Heseltine. Second edition revised throughout by Sir Paul Harvey. (Oxford University Press, $13.50.)

THE HOME BOOK OF PROVERBS, MAXIMS AND FAMILIAR PHRASES; selected and arranged by Burton Stevenson. (Macmillan, $20.)

If, as is sometimes said, the only real test of value in literature is permanence, then surely proverbial literature is the greatest of all. The Gods of the Copybook Headings, as Kipling called them, survive all fashions and philosophies of art. Many of the old saws in these collections are of such antiquity that their origin can merely be conjectured.

An illustrative instance, discussed by Mrs. Heseltine in her introduction to the revised Oxford compilation, is the famous injunction Panta lithon kinei, which is to say, "Turn every stone." Such, according to the story, was the advice given by the Delphic oracle to some enterprising Greek who had bought a piece of ground in which a defeated Persian general was supposed to have buried a considerable quantity of treasure. Mr. Stevenson, citing an authority with the awesome title of Corpus Paroemiographorum Graecorum, says that the name of the speculator was Polycrates and that it all happened after the defeat of the Persians under Mardonius at Plataea in Boeotia in 479 B. C.; but this could scarcely mean Polycrates, the celebrated tyrant of Samos, who died 36 years before the battle of Plataea. Mrs. Heseltine, citing a Roman named Zenobius, says that the treasure-hunter was a Theban and that it is all supposed to have happened after the battle of Salamis.

I mention these discrepancies merely to show the difficulties attending this kind of scholarship, and with, of course, no intention of involving myself in the squabbles of the learned. Both Mr. Stevenson and Mrs. Heseltine cite a variant of the proverb from the Heracleidae of Euripides, Panta, kinesai petron. Mrs. Heseltine mentions another authority who seeks to derive the proverb from the small stones used by the Greeks for a game resembling checkers, and yet another who derives it from the practice of ancient fishermen, methodically turning over stones in search of crabs. Even in proverbs whose origin is far less remote, the allusions have frequently grown obscure, as for example the admonition to mind one's P's and Q's, meaning to be discreet or circumspect in one's behavior. One theory, cited by Mr. Stevenson, is that it comes from the score of quarts and pints chalked up by the old-fashioned publican or tavernkeeper; but another theory, hardly less plausible, is that it arose from the difficulty which very young school children have in distinguishing the minuscule forms of the two letters.

These works differ in scope and arrangement as much as in price. The Oxford collection appears to be limited to those proverbs which have gained currency in England, whereas Mr. Stevenson's book is an omnium-gatherum which really amounts to a grand revision of his well-known Home Book of Quotations. The Oxford classification is alphabetical, according to the cue word, while Mr. Stevenson's is as before, by subject, although his categories now seem much less broad. Thus one looks for "Much of a muchness" under "M" in the Oxford dictionary, but under the general heading "Likeness" in Stevenson. The new edition of Bartlett's Familiar Quotations (Little, Brown & Co., $8) preserves the chronological method adopted by its first editor, so that there one must remember that the first recorded use of the phrase in English was by Sir John Vanbrugh in the early eighteenth century, or else consult an index in the back of the book. All three methods have advantages and defects, but Sir Paul Harvey is so well satisfied with his own arrangement that he dispenses with a supplementary index. Mr. Stevenson's book is three times as big as its English rival, and doubtless contains three times as many references, though I confess I have not counted. However, the Oxford book includes many coarse and earthy maxims which Mr. Stevenson's is obliged to omit out of deference to his more squeamish American readers, and for the same reason, I forbear to give examples.

The tremendous power of proverbs over the mind is shown in the fact that hardly any of us gets through a day without quoting at least a half dozen of them, and for professional moralists, such as editors and pedagogues, the score is usually much higher. One explanation, no doubt, is that most of prefer to swallow predigested ideas rather than endure the harrowing processes of thought; and this human inclination has much to commend it, since most of what passes for original thinking turns out to be an elaboration into many turgid words of what some proverb had already concentrated into one sharp and vivid epigram. At certain stages of civilization, wisdom is deemed to consist in the memorizing of a supply of maxims large enough to include one appropriate to every contingency of life. Another explanation of the power of proverbs, I suspect, is that our minds work for the most part in inverted syllogisms. That is to say, having been led by intuition or by self-interest to a given conclusion, we cast about for a premise or axiom on which it can be supported, and a proverb is always at hand to fill the need. And this, I dare say, is why there is scarcely any maxim in these collections which is not flatly contradicted by some other.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Somebody Must Pay

ONE OF THE PENALTIES of President Truman's stirring victory is that he must go on doing the dirty jobs of Government. And it now seems all too likely that raising taxes is going to be the first and foremost among these unpleasant tasks. In fact, if the President pays his customary attention to his expert advisers, he will ask the Congress to raise something like the huge total of five billion dollars of additional Government revenue.

Treasury and Budget officials are not making any public statements on higher taxes. Yet, as they point out privately, the facts speak for themselves. It is worth noting that they would have spoken just as loudly to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey as to President Truman. For the facts are both simple and inescapable.

In this fiscal year the Truman-vetoed tax cut will cost the Government, according to the estimates of the Council of Economic Advisers, upward of five billion dollars. As a consequence, the Treasury will run into the red by an estimated billion and a half dollars. Every economist, from left to right, agrees that such deficit financing in boom times is economic insanity. And the hard fact is that next year, unless the most important commitments of the United States are to be briskly tossed into the ash can, Government expenditures are sure to be sharply increased.

THE CHIEF AREAS of increase can be briefly listed. The greatest increases derive, of course, from fear of Soviet aggression. Defense spending, which now accounts for about 30 per cent of the load on taxpayers, will have to be boosted by an absolute minimum of a billion dollars—and the budget experts agree that if the boost can be held to a billion a miracle will have been achieved.

Now that the goods are in the pipelines and the checks are actually being written, the European Recovery Program is likely to cost the Treasury about a half billion dollars more next year. Rearmament of Western Europe is clearly in prospect. The lowest guess for the first year's cost is a billion dollars, and the final figure is almost certain to be more than this.

To this, add China. It is becoming daily more clear that the United States can either apathetically accept the appalling catastrophe of a China totally dominated by the Kremlin, or can make a great effort to avert the catastrophe. Some such effort is almost certain to be made, and there is no doubt that it will be costly.

At home, there are two lesser areas of probable increase. The farm-support program may well run into the hundreds of millions, depending on the size of crops and the world agricultural market. Moreover, the President is committed to a program in the social security, housing, health and education fields which, according to a preliminary estimate by the Council of Economic Advisers, should cost about an extra half billion dollars. Against all these increases, only comparatively small savings, especially in tax refunds and veterans' expenditures, are possible.

THUS IT IS obvious that unless the country is to invite disaster by operating deeply in the red, a tab of several billion dollars in increased taxes is going to have to be picked up by somebody. Who is it to be?

To that question there is among the experts a pretty unanimous answer—the corporations. The community-property provision of the new tax law will not be repealed. The high-income brackets may have to carry an extra load. But the fact is that as regards the rich, the cow may not be exactly dry, but there is not enough milk left to fill the huge pail. That leaves the corporations, currently enjoying the highest profits in history.

There is as yet no agreement on what form increased corporation taxes are to take. There are in the Government two schools of thought. One school favors an excess profits tax. The chief objection is that a peacetime excess profits tax will tend to freeze the economy, to the disadvantage of the small businessman. The second school favors a simple increase in the graduated tax on profits. The objection here is that such an increase will add fuel to inflationary fires, since producers will tend to hand on the tax in increased prices to the bedeviled consumer.

INHERENT IN BOTH forms of increased taxation is the danger that businessmen will angrily respond by cutting expansion and other commitments to the bone, bringing the specter of depression out of the wings, to front and center stage. Yet the fact remains that the vast bulk of Government spending is now essentially a response to Soviet pressure. No one likes high taxes. Yet it is difficult to see how very high taxes can be avoided, unless this country is simply to fold its hands in these menacing times and hope for the best while failing to prepare for the worst. If Governor Dewey knew any other alternative to high taxes, he never revealed it.

U. N. Food Unit Opens Sessions Here Today

By the United Press

Delegates from 57 countries gather here today for another stab at solving the age-old riddle of whether man ever can produce enough food to meet his basic needs.

The meeting of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization will open in the face of the obvious fact that the world's population has been growing faster than its food production. How to bring about a balance is the problem facing the food organization.

This is the fourth meeting of FAO since it was set up during the war to help guide the world toward bigger food production and fairer distribution of supplies.

Among other things, the delegates must try to find ways of convincing farmers in countries like the United States that they will not plunge into a period of surpluses and low prices if they continue to produce at present rates.

FAO Director General Norris E. Dodd said the delegates also will focus their attention on the following urgent problems:

1. How food production can be stepped up in underdeveloped countries which are chronically unable to feed themselves. In this category are China and India, which have famine as their constant dinner companion.

2. How FAO can weld the food production plans of the various member nations into a single overall program aimed at meeting the world's food requirements fairly and economically.

The importance of United States production was stressed previously by Viscount Bruce, Australian chairman of the FAO council. He said that although food prospects have improved greatly since last November, the picture still is grim.

Stassen's Talk On Air Draws Double Blast

By the United Press

Two Democratic Senators yesterday leveled a verbal blast at Harold F. Stassen for his charge that President Truman's campaign pledges would produce a "Truman depression" if translated into law.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) accused the former Minnesota Governor of the "most brazen factionalism" in making the charge in a radio interview last Friday.

"He doesn't have the slightest idea what the Republican Party should stand for," O'Mahoney told reporters. "He's just talking anti-Democrat. No successful Republican Party can be built up on the basis of that interview which was utterly devoid of ideas."

Senator Carl A. Hatch (D., N. Mex.) said Stassen's statements were "a meaningless generalization, just as the Republicans conducted their recent campaign."

Both he and O'Mahoney denied that the President's program would lead into a depression. Hatch said he was "quite confident that the main parts of the program will be instrumental in preventing a depression."

Pressure Blocs Ready For Spree, Capper Says

Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) said yesterday that "just about every pressure group in the Nation" has read a "mandate" into the election results.

"And their leaders are coming to Washington to collect in the first 100 days of the Truman New Deal Congress," he said, adding that "Washington again is the city of great expectations."

Election Footnote

By Mark Sullivan

A Masterpiece Of Demagogy

THE OUTPOURING of "who-done-it" post-mortems of the election tends to put responsibility on the loser, saying that the cause consisted mainly of policies followed, and others not followed, by Mr. Dewey and the Republicans, their actions and their inactions. To blame the loser is human nature, and in this case is largely justified.

But a survey of the campaign President Truman followed tends to show that it was the winner who was mainly responsible for the outcome. Much of what has been said about Mr. Truman's ineptness as President is well justified. But Mr. Truman as politician—or, to use a more elevated term, political strategist—seems to be a different person. Indeed it would be difficult to find in American political history a presidential candidate who began his campign under detriments as adverse as Mr. Truman's, who conducted his campaign with such shrewd adaptation to the conditions confronting him, and who won.

A REMARKABLE FACT, giving high rank to Mr. Truman's performance judged as political strategy, is that the outlines of his campaign were laid down in advance, whether consciously or instinctively. Whichever it was, what can now be recognized as a blueprint of the main lines of Mr. Truman's campaign can be found in the speech he made when accepting nomination from the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia last July, and steps taken by him about that time.

That convention had been reluctant to nominate Mr. Truman, and, after nominating him did not expect he would win. Much of the left wing of the party had gone off into a new one, the Wallace Progressive Party. Much of the right wing was in process of going off as the new States' Rights Party. In this condition Mr. Truman, in his acceptance speech, was telling the convention, prophetically as it turned out, why their reluctance to nominate him had been unnecessary, why their expectation of defeat in November was not justified. And in telling them he laid down what turned out to be the main lines of strategy by which he might hope to win and which he successfully followed.

He specified the principal groups whose votes he might expect: "Never in the world were farmers of any republic as prosperous as the farmers of the United States. And if they don't do their duty to the Democratic Party, they're the most ungrateful people in the world . . . And I'll say to labor just what I've said about the farmers—they are the most ungrateful people in the world if they do not support the Democratic Party."

AS CLASS APPEAL, that was atrociously crass. But as voter-appeal it was successful. Mr. Truman got the support of labor and the farmers. And, of the two, the group that had the largest share in electing him was the one on whom he laid most emphasis, the farmers.

As the principal issue of the campaign, Mr. Truman adopted what had been written into the party platform: "The Republican Eightieth Congress is directly responsible for the existing and the ever-increasing high cost of living."

As an assertion of fact, that was easy to refute. But as campaign strategy, in the stress Mr. Truman put upon it, it was extremely potent. Mr. Truman put sensational emphasis on this issue, by announcing, in his acceptance speech, that he would call a special session of the Republican Congress he was denouncing. In calling the session he demanded from it legislation to check the rising cost of living, well knowing, undoubtedly, that the Congress, its members busy with their own campaigns, would not have time to act on all the legislation he asked, and would not want to pass much of it even if there was time.

In making the record of the Republican Eightieth Congress his principal issue, Mr. Truman may have sensed potential advantage in the fact that the Republicans in nominating their own presidential candidate, had passed over Senator Taft, who had been the principal leader in making the record of that Congress. The Republicans seemed to assume that the issue was not their record but that of Mr. Truman, and of the Democrats during 16 years in power; they seemed to assume that the campaign was one to turn the "ins" out. This assumption Mr. Truman negatived by his political shrewdness and his aggressiveness.

House Group to Leave For Europe Tour Today

Seven House members, six of them from the Armed Services Committee, will leave today for a study of the Berlin airlift and other military problems in the occupied zones of Europe.

An announcement by the national military establishment last night said the trip is at the suggestion of Defense Secretary Forrestal, with the concurrence of Chairman Andrews (R., N. Y.) of the House committee.

Democrats to Meet

A meeting of the Hillside (Md.) Democratic Club will be held at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Hillside Fire Department.

GOP Rebels May See Truman

By the United Press

Spokesmen for "liberal" Senate Republicans may meet with President Truman later this month to plan cooperation on passage of progressive legislation in the Eighty-first Congress, observers believe.

Some GOP strategists also are planning to urge Republicans seeking to overthrow the "old guard" to develop a positive program of their own that will not merely echo Administration proposals.

Several liberal Republican Senators have announced openly that they will join the Democrats in supporting Administration social welfare legislation rejected by the Eightieth Congress.

Among these are Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), and others.

Has Offered Cooperation

Aiken has written to President Truman offering his cooperation on issues such as Social Security expansion, Federal aid to education and long-range farm proposals.

Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath has replied that "the cooperation of progressive, liberal Republicans on progressive, liberal legislation would be welcomed."

The logical next step, political analysts say, is a meeting between a spokesman for the GOP group and President Truman.

Truman Reiterates 'Neighbor' Policy

Key West, Fla., Nov. 14 (AP).—President Truman declared tonight that the peoples of the American republics "must continue to work together for their economic and social progress."

His reiteration of the hemispheric "good-neighbor" policy came in a statement acknowledging congratulations from people of sister republics on his stunning election victory. He expressed "sincere hope" the coming years would strengthen the bonds of inter-American friendship and that "practical measures of cooperation will increase the welfare and happiness of all our peoples."

The President, vacationing at this submarine base, was reported drafting a message of congratulations on the birth of a son to Princess Elizabeth.

The statement came during a quiet observance of the Sabbath with his family.

The White House had no comment of a report out of Paris that Defense Secretary Forrestal said that the time of his resignation would be at the disposal of the President.

Nor was there any comment on a suggestion by Trygve Lie, United Nations secretary general, and Herbert Evatt of Australia of the U. N. Assembly that the four big powers resume negotiations looking to the end of the Berlin blockade.

Autumn Stirs Our Amateur Groups

By Richard L. Coe

AMATEUR LIFE—Make believe is occupying a lot of folks around town. Herewith a summary of what some of the groups are doing:

The Midtown Players, under joint sponsorship of the YMCA and the Southeastern University, is holding auditions tonight at 8 for Thornton Wilder's one-act "The Long Christmas Dinner" in the lobby lounge of the Y at 1736 G st. Fred Indorf is chairman of the new group's governing board, which includes Howard Hilton, Maggie Miller, Alma Stahl and Agnes Ainilian. Joe Rubin is stage manager, Rachael Camky is secretary-treasurer and Charles K. Boyajian is director. The group plans to do "Hay Fever" in January.

The Howard University Players tomorrow night will open a five-night run of Henrik Ibsen's "The Wild Duck." Dr. Anne Cooke, head of the speech and drama department, is directing the play in a setting by James W. Butcher. The group seems fond of the Norwegian. Last season it did a novel version of "Peer Gynt." The Howard Players work in Spaulding Hall on the Howard campus. Curtain is at 8:30. Further information from DUpont 6100.

The Southeast Dramatics Association, now in its second season will hold its regular meeting tonight at 8:30 in Friendship House, 619 D st. se., when cast and crews for "The Bad Man" will be announced. Another feature of tonight's SDA meeting will be the production of a one-act play, "Another Way Out," with Brenda Barradell, Elizabeth Mitchell, Robert Rainsbury, Tommy Ryan and Henter Snee acting under Randy Stiles' direction.

The Mount Vernon Players will present Walter Kerr's "Stardust," a satire on the college dramatics Professor Kerr knows so well, for a run beginning Thursday night to run through December 4. The company's plays go on in the Undercroft Auditorium of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 9th and Mass. Director Helen Brewer's cast of 17 includes Florence Ackerman, William F. Bohan, Mike Bonavia, Ethel Mary Casey, Barbara Belle Felton, Jack Flanagan, Mary Forrester, Art and Elizabeth Frazer.

Woodrow Wilson High School's music department will offer its annual light opera Thursday and Friday nights this week in the school auditorium. "The Chimes of Normandy" is the musical; curtain at 8:30 both nights.

The Blind Players of the District Association of Workers for the Blind will present "Arsenic and Old Lace" for one performance only Friday night at Lisner Auditorium. For the cast of 14, the theater will be dark even before the house lights go down, but guided by invisible strips of oakite under the Brewsters' carpet, they'll be as sure of the exact positions as sighted persons. Tickets at the AAA, the Willard Hotel ticket desk and the association's headquarters in the Albee Building.

The King-Smith Theater, which operates in the courtyard at the rear of 2118 Massachusetts ave., is preparing a production of Patrick Hamilton's "Angel Street," to open a two-week run December 1. This is the chiller that was born in London as "Gaslight," came to the American stage as "Angel Street" and reverted to its original title for the screen's Bergman and Boyer.

Catholic University's painstaking speech and dramatic department is laboring into the midnight hours for its production of "The Birds" This is the Aristophanes comedy about Cloud-Cuckoo-Land, a walled city which the Athenians make antigod and probird. The busy Walter Kerr has made a new adaptation of this, recognizing the fact that while the play's theme is timeless, the topical illusions studding the play will be best replaced with contemporary cracks, a perfectly defensible idea. This enticing offering begins its run December 3 in the campus theater.

The George Washington University Players have picked the same night, December 3, for their two-evening stand in Lisner Auditorium with a first Washington performance for "John Loves Mary." This is the Norman Krasna comedy which found over a season's favor on Broadway; rights were obtained for this area within a matter of minutes. Dr. Natalie E. White, of the speech and drama department, is directing. One hears that the play will take a brief tour of military bases and hospitals, which is a smart notion, for all the work that goes into the job might just as well mean more than three performances.

The Montgomery Players of Bethesda-Chevy Chase also have a script new to the amateur world, though a warhorse of its kind. "Life With Father." With its successor, "Life With Mother," established as a hit in Father's own Empire Theater, New York, the first Day classic is now available to nonprofessionals. Bessie Sanders is directing the comedy for a December 11 opening.

"MY FATHER'S HOUSE," the Israel film from the novel by Meyer Levin, will be shown tonight continuous from 7 o'clock in Cafritz Auditorium of the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw. Also on the program is the first short subject from the new nation, "A State Is Born."

Miss Neveu's Violin Recital Stirs Enthusiastic Acclaim

By Richard Keith

Ginette Neveu's violin recital yesterday afternoon at Constitution Hall was certainly one of the finest musical performances that Washington audiences have heard in some time.

The young French violinist has a stunning technique, confident stage manner and a poetic musical insight that is rare in anyone of her age. Her program, consisting of the G major Mozart Concerto, the Bach Chaconne, the Franck Sonata and a group of unhacknied show pieces, was a little on the long side, but the audience was enthusiastic and called her back for encores.

Pehaps her style of playing was least adapted to the Mozart Concerto, for she and her accompanist, Jean Neveu, almost lost themselves several times in their preoccupation with detail. Although some of this fussiness found its way into the Bach Chaconne, her performance was one to be remembered.

She and her accompanist did their best in the Franck Sonata. Her artistic sensitivity, coupled with a delicate warm tone, overcame the inherent defects of the music to such an extent that there wasn't a dull moment.

The final group displayed in full her phenomenal technique. She played thirds, fifths and octaves at an astonishing speed, and what was more remarkable was that they were in tune.

She sometimes lets her sensitivity get out of bounds, and her fourth string is occasionally a bit furry, but such details hardly seem worth mentioning.

Copeland Gives Recital

George Copeland, veteran authority on the interpretation of Debussy's piano music, gave a recital featuring the works of the great impressionist yesterday evening at the National Gallery.

Many object to Mr. Copeland's hearty approach to Debussy but, after enduring so many spineless, bloodless and aqueous performances of impressionist pieces, it is a real pleasure to hear them done intelligently.

Mr. Copeland plays surely, sensitively and with great attention to nuance. There were some slips that the purists would object to, but the spirit was there, and that, after all, is the first and most necessary thing. Pianists who have not heard him owe it to themselves to do so.

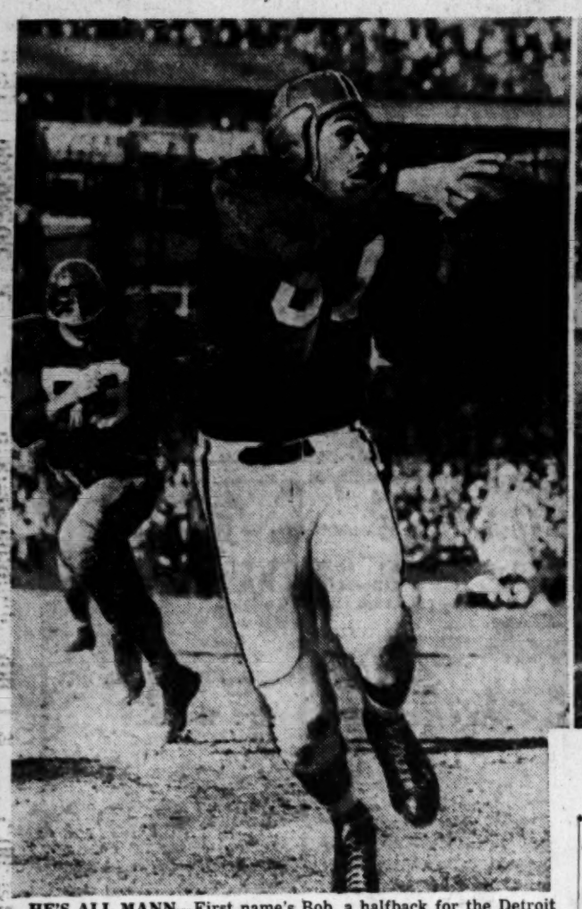
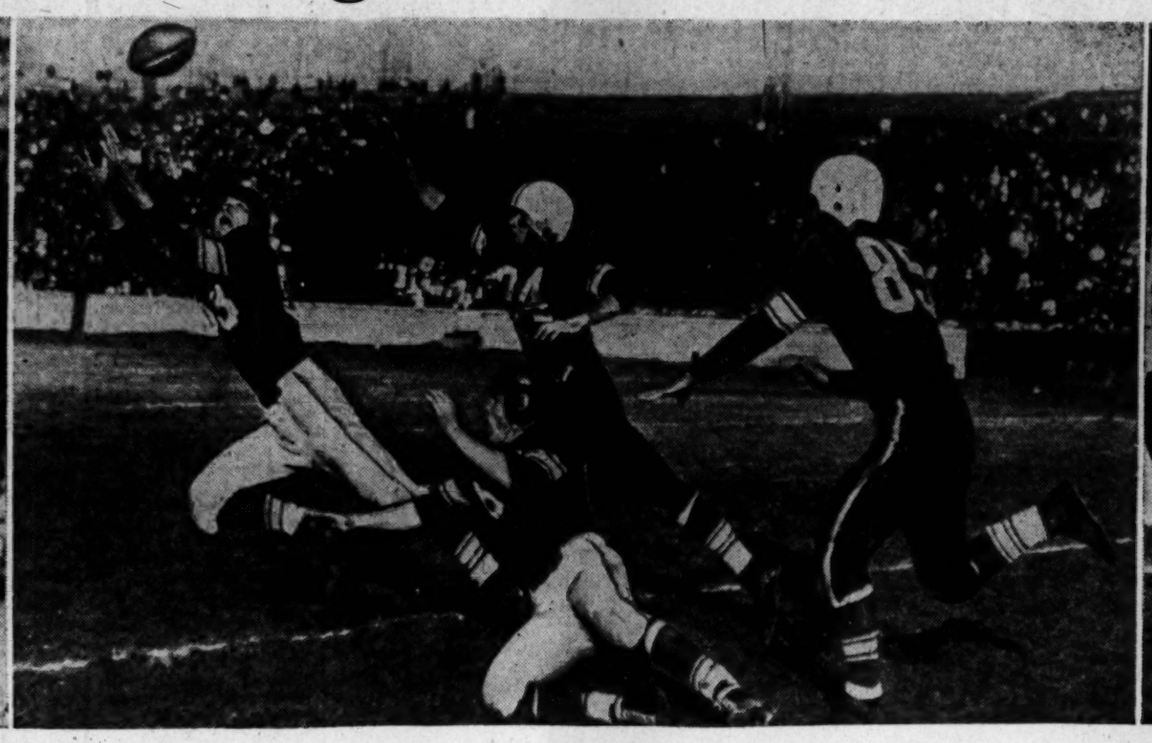
Skins Finish Strong to Lace Detroit Lions, 46-21



HE'S ALL MANN—First name's Bob, a halfback for the Detroit Lions. Here you see him hauling in a pass from Bill Dudley for a 20-yard gain against the Redskins yesterday. Al DeMao, Redskin center, is in the background. The Skins won, 46 to 21



ALL HANDS—Wendell Williams, left, Baltimore Colt end, nips a pass out of the air for a 10-yard gain against the Chicago Rockets in Baltimore's Babe Ruth Stadium yesterday. Trying to bat down the pass are Bob Perina (84) and Julie Rykovich (85) of the Rockets. The Colts won, 38 to 24, and are now tied with Buffalo and New York for the AAC's Eastern division lead

TOUCHDOWN EAGLES—End Jack Ferrante, of the Philadelphia Eagles, snares a pass thrown by Tommy Thompson for a touchdown in the Eagles' 45-0 victory over the Boston Yanks in Philadelphia. Halfback Joe Golding is the Boyank defender

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

GRIFFITH STADIUM, Nov. 14.—The Detroit Lions take the field against the Redskins, eager to accumulate a blot on their clean record unsullied by a victory in Washington in the last 11 years. They're no tremendous drawing card, as 4000 empty seats attest.

POVICH

There's big braid in the Redskins' official box on the 50-yard line, with Rear Admiral Thomas L. Sprague, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Personnel, the guest of Upstairs Admiral G. Marshall, the Redskins' chief of communications.

3-0, Redskins. That didn't take long. Terreshinski grabbed a Detroit fumble near midfield, Todd and Farmer worked the ball inside the Lions' 25, and Dick Poillon placekicks from the 32-yard line with the Redskins trading one $11 football for three points.

Sammy Baugh throws his first pass of the day and his average is worse than .000. He aimed it at Todd and Gillette snuck in to intercept on the Detroit 42. At that rate, Baugh should stick to the job he has been doing best—holding the ball for Poillon on field-goal attempts.

Fred Enke completes a 13-yard pass to Bill Dudley for the Lions but there was something about the play Coach Bo McMillan didn't like, because Enke is out of there and Le Force goes in to quarterback the Lions.

7-3, Lions. McMillan's strategy was above criticism. Le Force completes a pass to Whattaman Bob Mann and another to Dudley and a couple of plays later Wilson goes 11 yards off tackle and then two more for the touchdown.

The Redskins send in their offensive team and at the end of an 85-yard drive it is offensive to the Redskin rooters when the ball is surrendered to the Lions on the 3-yard line. Baugh's last-down pass to Nussbaumer was a thing of beauty only to the Lions as it fell harmlessly in the end zone.

Bob Mann takes a pass from Enke and flits in several directions, running 120 yards for a net gain of 51 to the Redskins' 6-yard line, where Mont makes a touchdown-saving, face-saving tackle for the Redskins.

14-3, Lions, and this was the team that was supposed to lose to the Redskins by two touchdowns. Joe Margucci barged through left guard from 2 yards out.

The Navy Band and a smart drill team of sailors provides the half-time show, and so at this point the day is not a total loss to the Redskins. Their front-office strategy of inviting the sailors to perform is saving dough in talent fees.

14-10. The Redskins go 65 yards in 3 minutes and 10 seconds, no record for the distance, but acceptable. Baugh throws a long pass to Crisler, Quirk goes 16 yards up the middle to the Detroit 7, and Todd outsmarts Enke and Roskie in the end zone to latch onto Baugh's pass.

Touchdown, Detroit. No, hold it. Gillette goes 87 yards with a Sammy Baugh pass, but the officials are playing drop the handkerchief. They say George Hekkers roughed Baugh on the pass and the Lions end up with a 15-yard penalty to their own 15.

17-14, Redskins. They whacked out those last 15 yards in seven plays, with Joe Quirk going over from the 1-yard line.

19-14, Redskins. Ever see a Lion with a brainstorm? That's what happened to Bill Dudley, who on fourth down on his own 2-yard line faked a punt, faked a pass, and then completed the cycle and faked a run, only to be smeared in the end zone for a safety by Koniszewski.

21-19, Lions and they're leading the fourth quarter The Lions gave Coach McMillan a big air lift. Gillette intercepted Todd's pass, Enke threw one to Mann for 22 yards, and from 13 yards out he slipped a pass to Dudley who was hoodwinking DeMao in the end zone.

26-21, Redskins. Hal Crisler gets into the act with a pass from Baugh and stomps 55 yards to the Detroit 4 before Watt bumps him out of bounds. The Lions, who can't count, wind up with 12 men on the field and are penalized to their 2 and Quirk bumped the ball over.

33-21, Redskins. Despite the league rule against gambling, Baugh throws a fourth-down pass to Todd from the Detroit 42, and a bit later he throws another one to Todd and completes a 99 2/3-yard drive for a touchdown.

39-21. Sandifer intercepts a Detroit pass and gets the kind of downfield blocking that takes him 46 yards to the Lions' 14, Baugh commits three palpable balks and with the Lions faked out of their shoes, he hits Farmer in the end zone.

46-21, Redskins. Tommy Mont rips off one run of 28 yards and another of 15 to take the Redskins to the Lions' 5, and then is given to wondering what he has done wrong, because they take him out and move Baugh in, and Sammy chucks a touchdown to Nussbaumer.

With five seconds remaining to play, the Lions must dig up four touchdowns or nine field goals in a hurry or they're gonna lost this ball game.

Thompson Paces 45-0 Eagle Victory

By Ralph Bernstein

Philadelphia, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles' one-two punch—Tossin' Tommy Thompson and Weavin' Steve Van Buren—combined to lead the Eastern Division pacesetters to a 45-0 victory over the hapless Boston Yanks today before 22,958 at Shibe Park.

Thompson, bidding to regain the league passing leadership he lost last week, tossed 18 passes, completing 10 for 197 yards and four touchdowns. None of his tosses was intercepted. Van Buren, the NFL's leading ground gainer, smashed for 137 yards on 16 attempts.

It was strictly no contest once the slow-starting Eagles caught the scoring fever.

Thompson and Russ Craft combined on a 70-yard pass play for the first Eagle touchdown on the first play of the second period. Craft caught the ball on the Boston 25 and behind a sharp block by End Pete Pihos galloped into the end zone. Cliff Patton converted the first of six successful extra points to run his streak to 34 straight.

Then in quick succession before the half ended, Thompson pitched 20 yards to End Jack Fer-

Cards Whip Steelers, 24-7

Pittsburgh, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Chicago Cardinals struck quickly for two touchdowns before a 33,364 crowd was seated today and went on from there to a 24-7 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Cardinals rolled up a 14-0 lead in the first 2 minutes and 13 seconds. Ray Mallouf pitched a long pass to End Malcolm Kutner for 44 yards and the touchdown. Then Charley Trippi took a Pittsburgh punt, swept wide to the sidelines and ran 67 yards unmolested for another score.

From there the Steelers dominated first-period play. Fullback Jerry Shipkey stormed 16 yards through left guard for a touchdown climaxing an 80-yard Steeler march.

Starting with an interception on the Chicago 32, the Steelers rolled to a first down on the 4 but were a generous yard short of the touchdown after four line shots. Later Ray Evans hit end Elbie Nickel with a 30-yard pass on the Chicago 1 but Nickel fumbled and Chicago recovered in the end zone for a touchback as the first period drew to a close.

From their own 20, the Cardinals mixed passes and hard running to score again as Pat Harder ended the 80-yard drive in the opening minutes of the second period with a 9-yard touchdown scamper. He then ran his kicking streak to 62.

The scoring ended in a 41-yard field goal placekick for the Cardinals by Ventan Yablonski in the fourth period.

W. & M. Reported Booking Pitt

Richmond, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—The Times-Dispatch said tonight it had learned authoritatively that William and Mary would play the University of Pittsburgh in its 1949 football opener in Pittsburgh, probably on September 24.

The Panthers would be the second new major opponent the Indians have scheduled for 1949. Earlier the college announced Michigan State would be met in Lansing, Mich., on October 15, in the first of a two-game series.

Sam Baugh Hurls Four Touchdowns

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

About to go down for the third and final time, the Washington Redskins clutched at a straw yesterday and came up with a thrill-laden 46-21 victory over the Detroit Lions, after trailing by 21-19 in the fourth quarter.

The straw, as usual, was Slingin' Sammy Baugh.

Before a mob of 32,528 customers who had almost given up hope, the Slinger twice brought the Redskins from behind. He threw four touchdown passes, bringing his total to 14 for the season, and kept alive Washington's final hopes of winning the National Football League's Eastern title.

The 'Skins remained in second place with their sixth victory against two defeats this season, still out in front are the Philadelphia Eagles, 45-0 conquerors of the Boston Yanks and Redskins' opponents for next week.

In pitching the 'Skins to their fourth straight triumph, Baugh, who holds more NFL records than anybody else, contributed to the shattering of a Washington team record with a fourth-period pass to Dick Todd. Baugh's fellow Texan was catching his 107th toss in 10 years with the Tribe, one more than was received by Wayne Millner in nine years.

In the process of winning, the Redskins also broke one league mark and tied another. Dan Sandifer, brilliant rookie from Louisiana State, intercepted a Lion pass in the final period and ran it back 36 yards. The yardage brought his total to 251 on pass run-backs, bettering the 238 yards amassed by Bill Dudly in 1946.

It was tow-headed Dan's eleventh pass interception of the season, and with it he equalled Baugh's own league mark set in 1943.

Exciting Game Throughout

To spectators, who didn't know or care about the figures, it was merely a whale of a game to watch. Probably the most exciting of the season. And they had to give credit to the entire Washington force for coming back, stopping a persistent Lion threat and winning under wraps.

Besides Baugh's four pay-off shots, two of them to Todd for 6 and 13 yards, the locals' heaviest scoring was done by huge Ed Quirk, a transplanted Missourian who runs something like that State's mules. Twice Quirk went into the end zone for Washington, and two other times he bulled his way across and had the effort called back.

Tom Farmer and Bob Nussbaumer each was the recipient of a Baugh pass as the 'Skins slammed the door in Detroit's face. And mixed into proceedings was Dick Poillon's field goal and four extra points, John Konziszewski's tackle of Dudley for a safety,

Colts Stage 28-Point Rally To Win 38-24

Baltimore, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Baltimore Colts staged a 28-point second-half rally to whip the Chicago Rockets, 38-24, today and stay in contention for Eastern division honors in the All-America Football Conference.e

The Colts went into a triple tie with New York and Buffalo by winning their fifth game in 11.

The 21,899 home fans in Babe Ruth Stadium had a worried first half in which the Colts had to come from behind for a 10-10 standoff.

But they went to town after the intermission on the hard running of Bus Mertes and passing of Y. A. Tittle to trounce the team which beat them earlier this season.

The opponents matched field goals and touchdowns in the first half.

Chicago scored first after center Fred Negus recovered Mertes' fumble on the Colt 20 two plays after the opening kickoff. Stopped right there, the Rockets called on Jim McCarthy to boot a field goal.

On the first play of the second quarter, Quarterback Jess Freitas connected for the first of three touchdown passes. Bob Livingstone made a circus catch on the 25-yard line and eluded two Colt tacklers to run the remaining distance and complete a 55-yard play.

Behind, 10-0, Baltimore got back in the game a few minutes later when Mertes plunged over from the nine to cap a 62-yard march. With 20 second remaining in half, Rex Grossman placekicked a field goal from the 28-yard line to knot the count.

Baltimore forged into the lead at the outset of the third quarter when Jake Leicht intercepted a

'Our Best Game'—Snavely; 'It Was My Fault'—Tatum

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

WHAT HAPPENED to Maryland last Saturday?

Practically everything. And what little didn't happen to the Terps in their 49-20 shellacking by North Carolina could easily happen next Saturday when they play Vanderbilt.

Washington last night was still talking about the biggest football disappointment of the season, achieved before the biggest local college crowd of all time, 34,588.

"How do you explain the complete disintegration of a team which vaulted into a 7-0 lead and then blacked out?" one caller wanted to know.

Here's what Coach Carl Snavely of the Sugar Bowl bound Tar Heels had to say:

"We played our best game of the year. Maryland made mistakes and we cashed in on them. Our team was alert. The difference in the teams is not nearly so much as the score indicates. Maryland's tackle, Ray Krouse, is one of the best I've seen."

Coach Jim Tatum of the shellacked Terrapins put it this way:

"Whenever a quarterback on a T-formation team has a bad day, the team will have a bad day. Vic Turyn was off Saturday and it hurt us tremendously.

"The real fault for our disappointing showing, however, lies with me. I did a poor job preparing our boys for the game. Carolina didn't surprise us. We had them pretty well scouted and we expected them to use the defense they used against us. Yet, we couldn't do anything with them. I simply couldn't get over to our boys the type of game I wanted them to play."

To the thousands of spectators, the turning point in the ball game came in the first quarter shortly after the Terps had marched 86 yards for a touchdown the first time they got hands on the ball.

With his team leading, 7-0, and having just moved up 12 yards on running plays only to the Terp 42, Turyn elected to pass. His effort was a dangerous, disaster-inviting toss into the flat.

Bears Held To 7-6 Win By Packers

By Jerry Liska

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Chicago Bears and Green Bay Packers staged one of their traditional bruising battles, with the hard-pressed Bears finally scraping a 7-to-6 National Football League triumph before 48,113 fans today.

The co-leading Bears of the Western division scored in the third period for a 7-0 margin, but the aroused Packers tallied with little more than three minutes of the game left.

Green Bay's Ed Cody was wide and low on his extra point placement try, and that was the game.

The Bears, who earlier this season trimmed Green Bay, 45 to 7, were lucky to get by the Packers today for the seventh league win against one defeat.

The Bear touchdown came on a 34-yard pass from Sub Quarterback Bobby Layne to Halfback George McAfee.

Halfback Allen Lawler, pinch-hitting for injured Johnny Lujack, who failed to suit up today, placekicked the game-deciding point.

The Packers stormed 80 yards for their score which also came on a pass. Jack Jacobs rifled a 13-yard

Rams Clout Giants, 52-37

By Austin Bealmear

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Los Angeles Rams came from behind with three touchdowns in the final period to whip the New York Giants, 52 to 37, in a wild National Football League game here today before 22,766 fans at the Polo Grounds.

For three quarters the game was a thriller, filled with long runs, pass interceptions and frequent fumbles.

When rookie Joe Scott rambled 9 yards on a kickoff return for his third touchdown and Guard Bob Dobelstein scored on a 20-yard runback of a pass interception, the Giants went to the front(37-31.

The customers who had seen the two teams pack four touchdowns into 3 minutes and 24 seconds in the third period were ready to congratulate the Giants on their third victory in eight starts.

But the Rams had other ideas. Dick Hoerner tied the score early in the fourth quarter with a 4-yard smash at the end of a 40-yard march. Fred Gehrke's 48-yard punt return laid the stage.

Then Bob Waterfield, whose 36-yard field goal in the third quarter looked like it might be the margin of victory, booted the fifth of his seven conversions to put the Rams ahead to stay.

Waterfield, back in fine form, pitched a 12-yard pass to Hoerner for the clinching touchdown and added another for good measure on an 18-yard heave to Don Currivan in the final minutes.

The Rams scored first, on a 31-yard pass from Jim Hardy to Howard Hickey. The Giants tied it up in the opening period when Char-

Mikan Scores 36 But Lakers Lose

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 14 (AP).—Despite a 36-point performance by big George Mikan, the Rochester Royals defeated the Minneapolis Lakers, 92 to 75, in a hotly contested Basketball Association of America game before 4200 here tonight. He scored 38 Saturday night against Providence.

The Royals winning their fourth game in five starts, battled the Lakers on a furious point-for-point basis through the first half, then broke the game open with a 30-point production in the third period.

Over San Francisco

Largest Pro Crowd of All Time, 82,769, See Browns Win, 14-7

Cleveland, Nov. 14 (AP).—Cleveland's Brown's, two-time champions of the All-America Football Conference, took undisputed possession of the league's lead today as they handed San Francisco its first loss in 11 starts, 14-7.

It was the tenth win of the year for the unbeaten Browns, and the rugged game was played before 82,769 fans, largest crowd ever to see a professional league contest.

The Browns needed a break to take the verdict and they got that break, and their first touchdown, in the first 45 seconds as Halfback Forrest Hall fumbled the opening kickoff and Capt. Lou Saban of the Browns recovered on the 49ers' 14.

Graham Scores

Automatic Otto Graham, former Northwestern All-American, missed on a pass, but on the second play scampered around end for the score after faking another aerial.

The 49ers came back with an 82-yard march for their score in the same session, Fullback Joe Perry hitting center for a yard to climax the drive which consumed 18 plays featured by John Strzykalski's 24-yard jaunt around right end, and a 14-yard run by Franke Albert.

After that the Browns staved off a flock of San Francisco threats, three intercepted passes and two more recovered fumbles turning the trick.

The Browns put the game on ice as they went 84 yards in 11 plays after the second-half kickoff, with Edgar (Special Delivery) Jones skirting end for the counter. Lou Groza, the Browns' golden-toed placekicker who missed two attempted three-pointers from around midfield, made good on both extra point tries.

Graham Passes on Target

In the second scoring series Graham uncorked three completed passes in four attempts, hitting Cowan for 13 and 28 yards, and Ara Parseghian for 15. Graham connected on 12 of 26 passes for 147 yards, while left-handed Albert tried 15, completing 6 for 32 yards.

Dons Jolt Buffalo Title Hopes, Win, 27-20, in Final Minute

Looking Ahead . . .

Yankees Loaf To 21-7 Win Over Dodgers

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The New York football Yankees, dreaming of next week's clash with Cleveland, awakened just often enough today to defeat Brooklyn, 21 to 7, in an All-America Conference game.

The game had been advertised as a Donnybrook. Until its dying seconds it was the season's dullest in the huge ball park, providing hardly enough action to keep the 15,555 paying customers awake.

The biggest question concerned Brooklyn's ability to score. The Dodgers proved right off that they couldn't without some help.

With eight seconds to go they did get across the double stripe after George Strohmeyer picked up 8 yards on the next play and then whipped a forward to Bob Hoernschemeyer for the tally.

Buddy Young got the first of the Yankee markers, rushing 24 yards to the 6 and then going the remaining yards on the next play early in the first. Pete Layden, set free by a crisp block by Bob Sweiger, got the second in the second period on a 15-yard scoring jaunt.

Spec Sanders ambled 43 yards to set up the other New York touchdown but fell 3 yards from the counting station. When he couldn't bang it over in two tries, Lowell Tew came in to blast it home.

Harvey Johnston booted all the extra points for the Yankees, running his string to 68 in a row, four short of Jack Manders' record set in the National League.

Interception, Dobbs Pass Beat Buffalo

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 14 (AP).—The Los Angeles Dons threw a block into the Buffalo Bills' Eastern Division title hopes in the All-America Football Conference today, edging the Bills 27-20 in the final minute before 23,725 persons in Civic Stadium.

The Dons parlayed the passing and running of Glenn Dobbs and the kicking of Ben Agajanian to victory.

Agajanian booted two field goals, one from 51 yards out, and three extra points. Dobbs scored two touchdowns and passed for the third.

Walter Heap set up the winning touchdown, which was made 30 seconds before the finish, by intercepting a pass by George Ratterman and running 17 yards to the Bills' 9. Dobbs flung to Joe Aguirre for 3 yards. Then repeated in the end zone.

Ratterman threw the first of his three scoring passes in the first period, flinging 3 yards to Alton Baldwin.

Agajanian, who tried five field goals during the afternoon, made two of them good in the second period for a 6-6 deadlock at halftime. The first went for 51 yards, 2 short of the conference record, and the second spanned 34 yards.

Dobbs completed two passes and ran the final 26 yards as the Dons went ahead for the first time, 13-6, on a 72-yard march in the third period.

Ratterman's 36-yard heave to Chet Mutryn, followed by Kulbitski's place-kick, enabled the Bills to pull up on even terms. The Dons roared back as Dobbs hit Aguirre for 28 yards and Walt Clay for 19, then swept for the final 6. Ratterman completed five passes, the last for 28 yards to Al Baldwin, who slid into the goal post after making the catch on the 2. Kulbitski's kick made it 20-all.

Dobbs took off the pressure with an interception. Agajanian's field goal attempt from his own 44 fell short on the Bills' 11. Heap's interception followed, setting up the victory.

THERE'S A HEAD ON THE PLAY—And it belongs to Dick Todd, of the Redskins, but Jim Gillette, of the Detroit Lions, seems to be trying to deprive him of it here as he applies a headlock on Todd in the second quarter of yesterday's Redskins-Lions game. The legs belong to Bill Miklich, of the Tigers. No. 83 in the foreground is Kelly Mote, of Detroit, while No. 33 in the background is you-guess-who of the Redskins. The Redskins won, 46-21

Redskins Lace Lions, 46-21

When Wilson fumbled on the Lions' first offensive a minute after the game started, and Joe Tereshinski recovered for Washington, fans sat back to await the Skins' deluge of touchdowns. It didn't exactly materialize.

The Tribe moved from its own 44 to Detroit's 25 in five plays. But then Todd was held for no gain and a Mont pass was just too long for McKee to reach.

It was on fourth down, needing 8 yards, that Poillon stepped back to the 32 and kicked a perfect field goal. Washington was ahead, 3-0, only five minutes had elapsed, and Redskin rooters were looking complacent.

The complacence lasted less than a minute, or while the Lions were bottled on their own 23. Dudley kicked out and Sandifer romped back to midfield. Baugh tried his first pass of the game to start Washington's drive. Instead it started Detroit's first scoring thrust.

Jim Gillette, a former Tribeman, stole the toss from Todd and was brought down on his own 42. Enke got the Lions moving with a 13-yard slant to Dudley and Clyde LeForce kept them moving, hurling first to Bob Mann for 20 yards and then to Dudley for 8.

The Lions needed a couple of yards on fourth down at the Skins' 13. Wilson got 'em 11, down to the 2. They needed only one of their four downs to get over, Wilson cracking the center for the score. Pregulman kicked the point that gave Detroit a 7-3 lead.

As the first quarter ended, Washington began what turned into an 84-yard march that went for nothing. In 16 plays, six of them complete Baugh passes, the home team thundered to within 6 yards of the end zone. Its downs exceeded its yardage at that point, however, and Detroit took over after Baugh's pass into the end zone was touched by neither Nussbaumer nor Taylor.

The Lionn were business-like about getting some more points. They plugged to midfield on line plays, then took to the air with high success. Enke dropped a long toss in the arms of Mann who ran 25 yards, making it a 51-yard pass play to Washington's 6.

After three downs the Lions were two yards away, but Magucci overcame that difficulty with a smash at center, dragging Howart Hartley across the goal line with him. Again it was Pegulman kicking the point and Detroit went to the dressing room at halftime with a 14-3 lead.

The Burgundy and Gold got serious after the half. Its first touchdown of the day came on a 63-yard swoop from the kickoff. Hal Crisler was Baugh's favorite target, for 8 and 27 yards, and Poillon and Quirk did the line-smashing as the Tribe romped to the 6. and Jim Peebles' single conversion.

A chronological survey of the game's scoring gives you an idea of Washington's (and Baugh's) terrific rally:

Detroit: Touchdowns—Wilson, Marguccl. Dudley. Points after touchdowns—Pregulman (3).

Washington: Touchdowns—Todd (2), Quirk (2), Farmer, Nussbaumer. Points after touchdowns—Poillon (4), Peebles. Field goal—Poillon. Safety—Koniszewski.

Baugh settled it with his 5-yarder to Todd, who was churning across the line as he grabbed the ball.

After Poillon's conversion it was 14-10, favoring Detroit, the point at which occurred what may have been the game's deciding play. Washington's Clyde Ehrhardt had intercepted an Enke aerial and carried it 20 yards. In retaliation Detroit's Gillette swiped another Baugh toss and never was stopped.

The big former Virginian raced 87 yards as Sandifer, Todd and finally Baugh had chances to stop him. But the touchdown was called back, Detroit being accused of roughing the passer. Instead of costing them a touchdown and a 21-10 deficit, the play developed into the springboard from which Washington jumped into its first lead at 17-14.

Lions Take Lead Again

A freak bounce of the next kickoff left the Lions in possession on their own 13. After trying to run four plays, with penalties interspersed, they were minus 9 yards and lucky at that. Quick thinking by Enke, who intentionally grounded a pass when he was trapped in the end zone by Peebles, staved off a safety once.

But Dudley wasn't as fortunate when he tried to do the same. Tackle Koniszewski barged in on him like a Mack truck as he dodged about in the end zone. It was two more points for the 'Skins, giving them a 19-14 edge.

That wasn't enough, because Detroit hopped right back into the lead as the final quarter opened.

Buggsy Was There

Washington fans got their first view—and little more— of Steve (00) Bagarus during the final period of yesterday's Redskin-Detroit Lion game. The running and pass-snagging star of 1945-46, making a comeback after breaking his leg, got into several plays but was used only as a decoy because of a sore toe.

TAR HEELS—From P. 13

'My Fault,' Tatum Says

onto the pass intended for End Fran Evans and sped 61 unmolested yards for the touchdown to tie the score. Until that pass interception, the Tar Heels were discombooberated. Maryland's lightning score had rocked them, but Maceyko's interception put them on their feet and they weren't to be knocked off them again.

Maceyko's touchdown gallop and Bob Cox's conversion tied it, but the Terps were still in the ball game. Five minutes later, however, they weren't. They had halted a Carolina drive on the 4-yard line only to fumble again and this time the Tar Heels cracked over to break the tie and go in front for keeps.

Another fumble brought on another score and so it went for the rest of the disappointing afternoon.

IN SHORT—Justice gained only 22 yards in 15 tries, his worst running performance in three years . . . Hosea Rodgers, whose fumbles almost cost Carolina three games this year, didn't bobble once Saturday . . . The Carolina game seems to inspire Terp fumbles and pass interceptions. Last year the Tar Heels used a fumble and two pass interceptions to score their 19-0 victory . . . Until Saturday, the Tar Heels hadn't scored a point in the second quarter this year. They got 21 in period No. 2 against Maryland . . . Dr. H. C. Byrd, Maryland U. president, had to select Saturday to show off his Terps to the Maryland State Legislature, his guests at the game . . . Bill Meek, Maryland freshman coach, who has scouted Vanderbilt five times, was called to Knoxville last night where his father is seriously ill. Meek had to leave before he had time to prepare a scouting report . . . For the first time in his two years of coaching at Maryland, Tatum gave his players an off day today . . . "Let 'em rest," he said, "because they won't be able to against Vanderbilt Saturday."

rante and 26 yards to Pihos for six pointers. Patton dropped back to boot a 37-yard field goal when an Eagle drive stalled.

The Eagles slowed down to one touchdown in the third period, Thompson tossing 2 yards to Bosh Pritchard after Van Buren smashes carried the ball inside the 5.

With both Thompson and Van Buren sitting on the bench, young Bill Mackrides passed 14 yards to Neil Armstrong for an early fourth-period touchdown and Jim Parmer slashed 5 yards off tackle for another score.

Boston never was able to penetrate further than the Eagle 36. Once Frank Seno carried an Eagle punt 96 yards for what appeared a score, but the Yanks were detected clipping and the run nullified.

It was Philadelphia's sixth straight win of the season—third by a 45-0 score—and kept the Eagles half a game in front of Washington which plays here next week.

Indianapolis, Lions Tie

Indianapolis, Nov. 14 (AP).—Eddie Bruneteau banged home a long screen shot midway in the final period to give Indianapolis a 5-5 tie with Washington in an American Hockey League game tonight.

Washington's Lions waited only 31 seconds to open scoring. Win Mousseau intercepted an Indianapolis pass in front of the Cap cage and drilled the puck home unassisted. Cliff Simpson squared the count for Indianapolis eight minutes later with a long shot and then the two teams really warmed up.

Ken Schultz sent the Lions back into the lead a couple of minutes later but successive goals in 15 seconds by Baldy Mackay and Gerry Reid gave Indianapolis their first lead of the night. It lasted less than two minutes, however, as Fred Porteous scored for the Lions to tie the score at 3-all at the end of the initial period.

Indianapolis went back into the lead in the middle period on another goal by Reid, but Washington forged in front on tallies by Phil Vitale and Gordon Duggan. The lead stood up until 8:54 of the final period when Bruneteau broke away for the last score.

After Waterfield was caught for a safety in the second quarter, Kenny Washington powered his way 31 yards to the second Los Angeles touchdown and Hoerner skipped 10 yards for the third a few minutes later.

Conerly passed 19 yards to Scott for the second New York marker and the half ended with Los Angeles in front, 21-16. After Waterfield's field goal, a fumble set up another Giant touchdown by Scott. Then the Rams pulled a 68-yard forward-lateral, Hardy to Hickey to Horvath, which brought a touchdown.

Scott came right back with his long run, but the Giants couldn't hang on to their lead. It was the third triumph in eight starts for the Rams.

Dawson, Pointing for Welter Title, Fights Milan Tonight

Freddie Big Favorite in Turner Bout

What shapes up as the best fight of the indoor season comes off at Turner's Arena tonight, where Freddie Dawson of Chicago meets Baltimore's Charley Milan.

Dawson, veteran club scrapper, is the choice.

The Milan fight is the first step in Dawson's campaign to move in on Ray Robinson's welterweight title.

Robinson is expected to vacate the 147-pound championship because of weight difficulties and shoot for Marcel Cerdan's middleweight crown.

With Robinson out of the way, Chicago promoters have already signed Dawson, a popular fighter in Chicago, to box Bernard Docusen, another topnotch welter, in the Chicago Stadium November 26 in what's being billed as a welterweight elimination contest.

The Milan fight, however, could turn out to be more than just a tuneup for Dawson.

Milan, main eventer in many Eastern clubs, has disposed of Santa Bucca, Bobby Lee and Buster Tyler in his latest successes.

Both boys are good, stiff punchers who can dish out and absorb punishment.

Dawson's peak performance came in Chicago a year ago when he boxed Lightweight Champion Ike Williams to a draw and then lost a split decision in a return bout.

Tonight's preliminaries, starting at 8:45 o'clock, match Garland Edwards against Jesse Baker, five rounds; Don Weber vs. Walter Ham, five rounds; Gene Holly against Roecoe Mercer, four rounds, and Dick Barber with Angelo Marini, four rounds.

GW Courtmen Play 23 Games

Seniors Maynard Haithcock, of Macon, N. C., and Dave Shapiro, of Brooklyn, N. Y., will co-captain the George Washington University varsity basketball squad this year.

Head Coach Arthur Zahn, in announcing this selection said the Colonials will have a 23-game season.

For the first time since the war they will return to Madison Square Garden, where they will meet Manhattan on January 4, and to Convention Hall in Philadelphia, for games with Temple and LaSalle February 19.

The schedule:
December 3, Quantico Marines; 6, at North Carolina State; 8, V. P. I.; 11, Richmond; 16, at Washington and Lee; 17, at V. M. I.; 20, at Virginia.
January 4, Manhattan at Madison Square Garden; 8, at Wake Forest; 10, at North Carolina; 12, at Georgetown; 15, V. M. I.; 26, at Maryland; 29, North Carolina State.
February 2, Virginia; 5, at Navy; 7, South Carolina; 9, Duke; 12, North Carolina; 16, at Quantico Marines; 19, Temple at Convention Hall, Philadelphia; 23, Georgetown; 26, Maryland.

Tatum, Rowland Speak Today

Head Football Coaches Jim Tatum, University of Maryland, and John H. "Bo" Rowland, George Washington University, will be featured speakers at the Touchdown Club's luncheon today at 12:30 p. m.

George Dixon, local columnist and humorist, likewise will address the gathering.

Bo Rowland Calls 62-0 Licking By Duke A Compliment to George Washington Team

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THAT 62-0 licking which Duke hung on George Washington Saturday wasn't meant to be complimentary, but Colonial Coach Bo Rowland's first post-game comment was, "I feel flattered."

"I feel flattered," he explained, "because Duke Coach Wallace Wade thought we were so good that he had to use his first stringers up until the final gun.

"Don't get me wrong. I'm not being facetious," the coach said. "Duke had the horses and didn't spare them. Could be that I'd have done the same thing if the shoe were on the other foot.

"At any rate, my boys and I are flattered and proud. We wouldn't have wanted them to pull their punches to try to make us look good," Rowland said. "And my boys stayed in there and fought to the end."

It's true that Duke used 37 players. But the Devils use a platoon system, and rested the first linemen only long enough for them to catch their breath, and run back in to resume the slaughter.

At the finish, such stars as triple threater Freddie Folger and Tackle Al DeRogatis were still in the game.

GW was a threat only during the first half while Andy Davis was in the game passing. But with Duke ahead, 27-0. Davis was removed to save his bruised right leg from further punishment.

Quarterback Stan Burak and Center Tal Dredge missed the entire game because of injuries. And the Colonials lost Guard Charlie Gunner, who fractured his leg.

Burak, recovering from an injured leg, and Davis are expected to be ready for Georgetown Saturday. But Gunner and Dredge, who is suffering from a neck injury, are out of uniform until next season.

The Colonials were outplayed by Duke, but not demoralized. "If I know my boys, they'll show up for practice Monday as though they'd never lost," said Rowland. "And they'll hustle and hustle to get 'up' for Georgetown."

From the talk among GW players, getting "up" for the Hoyas won't be too hard.

"My stomach's already itching for Saturday," said one GW player. "Somehow, beating Georgetown means just a little more to me than beating anyone else. I feel my best game coming up, and so do the rest of the fellows."

They've been pointing for that game since the season opened. The popular greeting among GW players has been "Hoya" instead of "hi-there." And the reply has been either "Saxa" or "horse-radish."

Kings Point Wins Mid-Atlantic Dinghy Regatta

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—The U. S. Merchant Marine Academy of Kings Point, Long Island, today beat out 12 other colleges to win the Middle Atlantic Navy fall invitation dinghy regatta on the Severn River.

The Kings Point sailors took an early lead and were never headed throughout the 21 races run today. They amassed a total of 248 points to top Harvard and Navy, who tied for second with 232.

Three races were run off yesterday.

Other colleges in the regatta and their total point scores were: George Washington, 227; Brown, 224; Princeton, 203; Cornell, 198; Hobart, 195; Delaware, 186; New York Maritime Academy, 161; Maryland, 134; Colgate, 115, and Stevens Institute, 115.

payoff shot to End Nolan Luhn in the end zone.

So tight was the battle on a slow Wrigley Field gridiron that each team had to punt 10 times.

Each club also tried a field goal without success, Green Bay's Ted Fritsch missing from the Bear 25 in the first period and Layne failing from the Packer 36 in the final quarter.

Game Rough, Penalties Plentiful

After Green Bay's touchdown, Bill de Correvont took the Packer kickoff and raced back 67 yards before he was downed from behind by Ed Smith on the Packer 30. That Bear threat ended on the 10.

The Bears sorely missed Lujack and Tackle George Connor, both injured against Los Angeles last Sunday.

The spirited play resulted in the Bears being penalized 90 yards and Green Bay 60, with Tackle Paul Lipscomb of Green Bay getting pitched out of the game in the first period because of unnecessary roughness.

Toward the end of the game a customer weaved onto the field and approached Jacobs, apparently bent on giving him some passing instructions. He was given the bum's rush from the field.

Score by periods:

Bears	0	0	7	0—7

Packers scoring: Touchdown—Luhn.
Bears scoring: Touchdown—McAfee. Point after touchdown—Lawler (placement).

Two Referees On Card Tonight

Anticipating a roughhouse of major proportions, the management has assigned two referees to handle this evening's wrestling feature at Uline Arena which pits the team of Rudy and Wally Dusek against Frank Hewitt and Jim Wallis.

Pete Peterson, an amiable newcomer will work the one-fall semi-final against George Sikorski. Lead-off bouts include Arnold Skaaland against Red Kirkpatrick and Geza Tako against Rocco Columbo.

Buffalo Breaks Record

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 14 (AP).—The Buffalo Bisons broke the American Hockey League record tonight by trouncing the Philadelphia Rockets, 16 to 4, before 7821 happy fans.

Terps Defend Harrier Title

Eight colleges will be out to snag University of Maryland's Southern Conference cross-country crown today in the twenty-first annual running of the championships. Coach Jim Kehoe's thinclads, paced by Bob Palmer, will defend their title over a 4-mile course here. Palmer set a new course record last year.

Entered in the championships besides Maryland are North Carolina, William and Mary, Duke, Richmond, North Carolina State, VMI, Virginia Tech and Davidson.

the Browns have won four, and today's count was the third by 14 to 7. Incidentally, today's win was the 150th for their coach, Paul E. Brown, since he started coaching at Massillon High School in 1932.

"Precision Paul's" teams have lost 23 and tied 6 in his long span through high school, Ohio State, Great Lakes and professional jobs.

Today's huge crowd surpassed by only 94 the previous professional football record of 82,675 set last year by the New York Yankees and the Los Angeles Dons on the West Coast.

Outfielder Buddy Lewis last night said he would definitely play with the Nats next season.

Lewis was scheduled to talk salary with Nat President Clark Griffith Saturday, but was unable to be away from his business in Gastonia, N. C. He said he plans to see Mr. Griffith in the near future.

Lewis stayed out of baseball last year to manage his automobile agency and bowling alleys in Gastonia.

Capture of Sicily Planned As Fall of Tunisia Neared

into the southeastern portion of the island. The supply staffs were again required to study the problem, and now they came to a more optimistic estimate than they had some weeks previously.

This change resulted from the unforeseen availability of a considerable number of LST's and the quantity production of the "duck," an amphibious vehicle that proved to be one of the most valuable pieces of equipment produced by the United States during the war. Incidentally, four other pieces of equipment that most senior officers came to regard as among the most vital to our success in Africa and Europe were the bulldozer, the jeep, the 2½-ton truck, and the C-47 airplane. Curiously enough, none of these is designed for combat.

Pantelleria Capture Surprisingly Easy

While these plans were still in preparation, study indicated the desirability of first seizing the island of Pantelleria, lying roughly between Sicily and the northeastern coast of Tunisia. This island was popularly known as the "Gibraltar of the central Mediterranean" and was assumed by many to be unassailable.

Mny of our experienced commanders and staff officers strongly advised against attempting this operation, since any failure would have a disheartening effect on the troops to be committed against the Sicilian shore. However, Admiral Cunningham, in particular, agreed with me that the place could be taken at slight cost. We based our conviction upon the assumption that most Italians had had a stomachful of fighting and were looking for any good excuse to quit.

In the actual outcome the capture of Pantelleria was so easy—the garrison surrendered on June 11, just as our troops were getting into their assault boats for the larger ships—that few people had any inkling of the doubts and fears that had to be overcome in launching the operation.

Personal Survey Preceded Assault

Indeed, objection had been so pronounced that I resolved to make a personal reconaissance immediately prior to the assault date in order to determine for myself that the defenses were sufficiently softened to assure success.

Admiral Cunningham and I boarded a British cruiser at Bone one evening, and during that night steamed eastward at full speed to join the squadron assembly near Pantelleria. Cunningham told me that the whole area was mined except for a narrow channel we were following, which had been swept. This prompted me to ask, "Are there no floating mines about?" His answer was, "Oh yes, but at this speed the bow wave will throw them away from the ship. It would be just bad luck if we should strike one."

The Prime Minister, who was then visiting with me in Africa, was very anxious to go along on this operation. I evaded direct reply but would never have agreed to his going, on the grounds that it involved needless risk for a man of his importance. But I had a difficult time indeed explaining to him afterward that Admiral Cunningham and I had always intended to participate. Two years later he reminded me that I had been very unfair to him on that occasion, especially as he had a personal financial stake in the enterprise.

Churchill Paid Off Quickly, Cheerfully

A small wager between us had grown out of his estimate that there were no more than 3000 Italians on the island. He offered to pay me five centimes each for all we captured in excess of that number. We took 11,000, and though I had naturally forgotten the joking wager, he paid up promptly, figuring out the exchange himself and remarking that at that rate (a twentieth of a cent each) he'd buy all the prisoners we could get.

In late May, a month before we were to attack Sicily, Prime Minister Churchill, with General Marshall and General Brooke, chief of the Imperial General Staff, came to my headquarters to discuss further the objectives of the Sicilian campaign, other than the mere capture of the island to assure free use of the Mediterranean Sea route. There was something to be said for closing down large-scale activity in the Mediterranean, once we had Sicily in our grasp, and saving everything for the main operation in northwest Europe.

In private conversation, however, Brooke told me that he would be glad to reconsider the cross-Channel project, even to the extent of eliminating that bold concept from accepted Allied strategy.

Gen. Brooke Seemed Adroit and Shrewd

He had commanded a corps during the short campaign on the Continent in 1940; both Alexander and Montgomery had served under him. Impulsive by nature, as became his Irish ancestry, he was highly intelligent and earnestly devoted to the single purpose of winning the war. When I first met him in November, 1941, he seemed to me adroit rather than deep, and shrewd rather than wise. But gradually I came to realize that his mannerisms, which seemed strange to me, were merely accidental, that he was sincere and, though he lacked that ability so characteristic of General Marshall to weigh calmly the conflicting factors in a problem and so reach a rocklike decision, I soon found it easy to work with him.

He said that he favored a policy of applying our naval and air strength toward the blockading of Germany and the destruction of its industry but avoiding great land battles on the main fronts. He held the belief that in ground conflict in a large theater we would be at a great disadvantage and would suffer tremendous and useless losses. He wanted to open no larger front than one we could sustain in Italy.

I do not know whether the Prime Minister agreed with the part of this opinion that favored the indefinite postponement of the cross-Channel invasion, but he did want to pour into Italy the maximum amount of Allied forces available in the Mediterranean.

Faith in Overlord Frequently Stated

Any suggestion or intimation of abandoning Overlord could always be guaranteed to bring Marshall and me charging into the breach with an uncompromising, emphatic refusal to consider such an idea for an instant. Not only did both of us still believe in, and frequently repeat, all the basic reasons for originally adopting the Overlord concept as our principal strategic effort in Europe, but we closely examined every proposal for committing troops elsewhere in the light of the eventual effect of weakening or strengthening prospects of success in Overlord.

Because of the existence of splendid naval communications at Malta that place was chosen as our headquarters for the initial stages of the operation. Most of our air formations were crowded into the airfields of northeastern Tunisia, so the principal air headquarters had to remain in the vicinity of ancient Carthage.

General Alexander, Admiral Cunningham, and I all went to Malta a day or so before the attack was scheduled, to be in position to take any action that might prove necessary. We were guests of Feld Marshal Lord Gort, governor of the island.

Far Different Picture In Battered Malta

Malta then presented a picture far different from the one of a few months earlier, when it was still the target for a hostile air force that had little effective opposition. Malta had taken a fearful beating but the spirit of the defenders had never been shaken.

The ship convoys bringing the troops to their allotted places had to come from ports stretched throughout the length of the Mediterranean. The timing and final maneuvering of the various naval columns had to be exactly performed in the narrow, mine-filled waters separating Sicily from the mainland and had to be done so as to keep the enemy in a state of confusion and indecision until the last moment. Admiral Cunningham, Admiral Hewitt, and all their subordinates performed the task faultlessly.

Everything was proceeding with seeming perfection until July 9, the actual day of the assault. Then the weather, which in that part of the Mediterranean is normally serene in summer, began to deteriorate so badly as to threaten our ability to land.

Approach Unsheltered Like East Beaches

Since the wind direction was generally from the west, it was the southern beaches for which we were anxious. The eastern beaches would have the shelter of the island itself.

I spent some hours with Admiral Cunningham in his office, to which meterological specialists brought frequent reports and forecasts. Naval personnel has a habit of referring to wind velocity in terms of "Force." In would come a man and say, "Force IV, sir," or "Force V, sir." For me this had to be translated into miles per hour, but I had no difficulty, watching Cunningham's face, in realizing that Force V was worse than Force IV. However, falling velocities were predicted for sundown and this cheered us, because if that tendency continued conditions by midnight should be satisfactory!

Some of us went outside for a short walk, but we watched the wind indicators fearfully, almost prayerfully, because the hour was fast approaching when it would be impossible to turn back assaulting forces from their intended landings. A message came from General Marshall: "Is the attack on or off?" My reaction was that I wish I knew!

Nothing to Do But Pray As Wind Increases

Evening approached with predictions indicating some slight improvement. We decided to proceed as planned, and I so radioed to General Marshall. My feeling was that, even if the forces on the southern coast should find it necessary to delay landing, those on the east would surely get ashore and we would have less confusion and disadvantage than would result from any attempt to stop the whole armada.

But the evening wore on and the wind velocity increased alarmingly. There was nothing we could do but pray, desperately.

The incident in which Gen. George Patton slapped two soldiers in a base hospital took place during the Sicilian campaign, General Eisenhower's own story of what happened and what he did about it, including what General Patton wrote to him after the incident was over, is told for the first time in the tenth installment of "Crusade in Europe," which will be published in this newspaper tomorrow.

Shortly after the incident, Allied troops had completely overrun the island and had, in three places, established themselves on the mainland of Europe. The crusade in Europe was now in high gear.

This is a condensed serialization of Dwight D. Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe." It contains highlights of the book to be published November 22, 1948, by Doubleday & Company. Copyrighted by Doubleday & Company, Inc.

500 Enjoy Bartenders' Sedate Ball

Q. Who tends bar for the Bartenders Local when the bartenders aren't tending bar?

A. The unlucky member who draws the short straw serves the setups and after that it's every bartender for himself.

That's about the way it was last night at the Bartenders' Ball in the National Press Club Auditorium. Not that there was anything untoward. No diplomatic corps affair could have been more sedate. And Arthur Murray doesn't have any smoother dancers. Nor the Rockettes any handsomer ladies.

As Club Michel's Bill Sterling, at 80, Washington's oldest bartender, said, it was no place for that certain inebriated gentleman who insisted on seeing the bouncer because he had to go home but didn't want to. No bouncers were there. They don't belong to the union.

What with the mixologists, their wives and guests, and delegations from breweries, distilleries and distributors, some 500 or so enjoyed the dancing and entertainment at Local 75's first annual get-together since the war began. Profits go to the union's welfare fund.

Farm, Labor Votes Cited in Truman Win

Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall last night largely credited the combination of farm and labor votes for President Truman's election victory.

Lauding what he termed the "only all-American party and candidate," Secretary Royall spoke extemporaneously at the victory dinner given by the Truman-Barkley Club of Washington for the Democratic central State committee. The celebration, held at the Madrillon Restaurant, 15th st. and New York ave. nw., was attended by nearly 50 persons.

Welburn Mayock, treasurer of the National Truman-Barkley Club of America, described American newspapers, pollsters and "political experts" as "propagandists with a nefarious intent to misrepresent facts to the American people."

Arthur Clarendon Smith, sr., president of the Smith's Transfer & Storage Co. Inc., and president of the District Truman-Barkley Club, opened the dinner by saying that it was mostly paid for by a 20-to-1 pre-election bet he won from Wayne Kendrick, a certified public accountant.

Others attending the celebration included former Representative Robert Ramspeck of Georgia, and Mrs. Ramspeck, Mrs. A. C. Smith, sr., William Edwards, chairman of the Speakers' Committee of the National Democratic Committee and Mrs. Edwards, and Mrs. Mayock.

Barkley Will Speak At Victory Dinner

James W. Bryan, publicity chief of the District Democratic Central Committee, last night announced that Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley will be the principal speaker at the committee's forthcoming formal "Victory Dinner."

Bryan, who called Senator Barkley in Key West, Fla., said the dinner will be held December 13, probably at the Mayflower Hotel.

CSC Probes Charges Against a Number In Internal Revenue

CIVIL SERVICE IS quietly investigating serious charges against a number of Internal Revenue employes, several in the Boston office.

It's reported that in at least two cases the accused employes, who collect Federal taxes from others, are under fire—of all things—for failing to pay proper income taxes.

FEDERAL BAR: This association of Government lawyers is working on a plan to raise Federal salaries. Tentatively, it would tie them to the cost of living and the Government would adjust salaries as the BLS cost-of-living went up and down. General Motors has such a contract with its employes.

SECRETARIES: The general part of the secretarial exam will be given in the McKinley and Roosevelt High Schools here on Saturday. The 10,700 applicants here will be called back later to take the typing and stenographic parts of the test. In other words, no typewriters will be needed for Saturday's exam. Jobs to be filled by this test are in and near this city and they pay from $2974 to $3727 to start.

PHS: The Public Health Service needs doctors for part-time work at its dispensary at 4th and D sts. sw. Applicants should apply to the medical office there. Openings are available on the 9 to 1 p. m. shift. PHS isn't able to accept physical exams of Federal workers because of the doctor shortage.

QUIZ: I was asked the other day to name the Federal agency which had the most $10,000 vacancies. I didn't even come close with my answers.

The answer is: The Excess Profits Tax Council, which has 11 $10,000 jobs open. It's composed of a 25-man board and only 14 of the jobs are filled. The council is in the Treasury Department and its chairman is Henry J. Merry.

Congress set up the agency several years ago to settle the claims of those who believe they overpaid excess profit taxes. Before the council is more than six billions in claims—a figure which makes it a most important agency.

INTERIOR: His friends are booming Assistant Secretary C. Girard "Jebbie" Davidson for either Undersecretary or Secretary of Interior, in event there are changes in those posts. Perhaps that's the reason why he changed his mind about resigning as of Tuesday. Davidson had made all his plans to practice law in Portland. But the President's reelection changed a lot of plans.

AFL: You can look for the American Federation of Labor to go on record for higher Federal salaries at its convention this week. The AFL also will plan a recruiting drive to round up more Federal employe members.

At its convention last week, the AFL metal trades department took a crack at the Navy's wage board system. It demanded legislation which would require the department to put union representatives on the boards. The department urged the Atomic Energy Commission to establish fair labor relations practices.

CIVIL SERVICE NEWS: Three exams of prime interest to senior college students will be announced soon. They will be: junior professional assistant, junior management assistant, and junior agricultural assistant. They will be used to fill 36 types of jobs at $2974 starting salaries. Many top-rank people first entered the Federal service through these tests. Upwards of 20,000 are expected to apply for them.

POWER CASE: We're all most grateful to our President for interceding in the Power case which was brought to his attention through this column. After 10 months of fighting red tape, Mrs. John S. Power, a widow with three babies, is finally getting rush service from VA and the Army on Government funds rightfully due her after her husband's death in line of duty.

But what's most important is the President's order to Defense Secretary Forrestal and to VA Administrator Carl Gray to recommend steps to prevent similar unnecessary delays in other cases. This presents a real opportunity and challenge to Government people to slash the heartless red tape which causes so much human misery.

The Power case isn't an isolated instance of clumsy bureaucracy. I was distressed to hear reports on a score or more cases over the weekend that were handled in the same bumbling and time-consuming manner—cases involving other Federal Agencies. That makes you wonder how many helpless people have the patience and the ability to fight through the red tape maze to get what is due them after deaths and accidents on the job in Government.

The alibis of Federal people on these cases don't impress me. An Army official, for example, lectured me for reporting that it took the Army 10 months to pay Mrs. Power her husband's final paycheck. He pointed out—which is true—that this paycheck comes from the General Accounting Office and he hinted it was GAO, and not the Army, where the red tape holds up final salary settlements. "We're lucky," he said, "to get a case out of GAO in three months."

GAO official returned the compliment with dividends—he said it often took six months merely to get an answer from the Army on such cases. The finger of blame also was pointed to the Civil Service Commission, the Treasury Department, and this and that agency—any device to shift the blame.

How the Best Soldiers in the World Are Made

THE ANXIOUS MOMENT — The theory learned, the dry runs over, Pvt. Aurelio B. Collado, 3115 Quesada st. nw., is on the firing line of the rifle range to demonstrate the results of all that has gone before. Never a believer in haphazard learning, the Army supervises and continues this most important phase of a recruit's training up to the point where it is put into practice. Pvt. Collado's coaches are Corpl. William K. Edens, 21, of 1337 Talbert ter. se., and Maj. Gen. Robert C. Macon, a native Washingtonian commanding the Seventeenth Airborne Division and Camp Pickett.

D. C. Draftees at Camp Pickett Find 'New Army' in Evidence

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

Camp Pickett, Va.—On June 7, 1944 (D-Day plus 1), a young Washingtonian named Gail H. Belmont was felled by a German machine-gun bullet in France and won the Distinguished Service Cross for his gallantry.

The same M/Sergt. Belmont, 27, whose home is at 1301 Longfellow st. nw., last Wednesday began helping make a soldier here of another Washingtonian, Werner K. John, 25, of 2738 Ordway st. Recruit John is one of 23 Greater Washington men inducted thus far under the peacetime draft.

John, ironically, is a veteran of the German army.

Born and raised in Germany, but the son of an American, John was forced into the German army in May, 1942, won an Iron Cross at Leningrad, and spent a year in a hospital. He has taken out his first United States citizenship papers.

Maj. Gen. Robert C. Macon, a native Washingtonian and McKinley Tech graduate, who commands the 17th Airborne Division and this vast camp, today will tell these recruits two things:

The mission of the Army is to become the best in the world, and—more personally—his door is always open to any soldier in his command.

The Human Factor

Over the rolling, wooded terrain of this 46,000-acre post, the "New Army" is in action. It is operating on the single idea indicated by General Macon—that a man will become a better soldier if he is treated like a human being.

Recruit John, with Robert E. Bell, 25, 129 Ritchie av., Silver Spring, Md., and Merico P. Thomas, 25, 4620 15th st. nw., were the second group of District draftees to arrive here. A week before, Aurelio B. Collado, 25, 3115 Quesada st. nw., and William M. Mumaw, 26, 2457 Tunlaw rd. nw., were the first Washingtonians inducted under the postwar Selective Service.

Also in training here as inductees are Matthew J. Largen, 25, 6011 44th ave., and James R. Sleeth, jr., 4308 Tuckerman st., of Hyattsville. Sleeth at 22, is the youngest Greater Washington draftee in training here. Representing Silver Spring, along with Bell, are James D. Rogers, 25, 9807 Brunett ave., and Emmett M. O'Grady, 1217 Linden lane.

Here's what happened to Recruits John, Bell and Thomas when they got off the train at Blackstone, Va., 3 miles from this camp, shortly after 5 p. m. Wednesday.

Check-In, Then Chow

A contingent of enlisted men under Capt. Henry Lowe, met them at the station and transported them here by bus with other incoming recruits. At the "initial receiving point" they were checked in and their individual records collected.

Less than an hour later they had polished off their first Army "chow"—roast pork, potatoes, tomatoes, Waldorf salad, cake with lemon sauce, bread and butter, and coffee. The same meal, or a similar one, would have been given them within an hour after their arrival had it been 2 a. m.

After dinner they filed over to "pre-pack," where they received their initial clothing issue: toothbrush, comb, shaving brush, razor, two towels, four handkerchiefs, poncho and duffle bag. They also donned herringbone twill fatigue uniforms—cap, jacket, sweater and trousers. They drew two blankets, sheets, pillowcase and mattress cover, marched to their barracks and made their bunks. On hand was a corporal, in charge of the barracks, who explained just how bunks are made and assisted them.

Army, With a Difference

There wasn't much to do after that. Many of the recruits wrote letters home, some trooped to a nearby post exchange. At 9:30 p. m. it was "lights out." To Recruits John, Bell and Thomas, whose bunks were together, things hadn't gone badly at all.

They had been treated as human beings. They had been told at every step where they were going and why, and their questions were answered courteously. It was the Army, but with a difference.

In the days to come they would find that leather-lunged drill sergeant gone. In his place would be a noncom whose directions would be given clearly and understandably. He would not "chew 'em out" with profanity—nor would they use it.

They would also find that blankets no longer provide the surface for crap games. Gambling, said one veteran noncom, is out. That includes card games, where money is involved, as well.

Semi-Holiday Observed

Thursday—Armistice Day—they observed a semi-holiday. There was the inevitable "policing" of their barracks and the immediate area, a bit of close order drill, some organized athletics. In the afternoon they went to the post theater, and that night had a bull session at the service club.

Their 21-month hitch in the Army began in earnest Friday, with reveille at 5:30 a. m. After breakfast "processing" was started with an orientation lecture by a young captain who wore the combat infantry badge of the late war.

He told them their first task was to write home. Should an emergency arise at home, he told them to tell their parents to contact their local Red Cross chapter, which would in turn get word to the recruits. "We'll arrange for you to get home as quickly as possible," he said.

They were also informed of what lay ahead—eight weeks of basic training, and after that the opportunity to go to "leader's school" if they were qualified, or to other schools, including Officer Candidate School.

To parents of the recruits went letters from the general, the chaplain and the company commander. The letters assured parents of the good health of their sons and asserted they are in excellent hands. Parents were informed that their visits here are welcome.

A chaplain reminded the recruits that not only spiritual guidance, but counsel on any of their problems was available day and night. He informed them that on the first three Sundays of their training they will be required to attend church services of their own faith or "morality" lectures.

Then came information on Government life insurance and bond allotments which those who sign up will pay out of their $75 monthly recruit wage. Following that, a movie portraying each step of the military tests ahead was shown. They learned that their training would be that of a foot soldier, not that of a paratrooper.

Their clothing and equipment issue was next—$201.99 worth of wearing apparel and gear. It began with olive drab undershirts and drawers and ended 50 yards down the "issue" line with an overcoat.

Later they had their hair cut—any way they wanted—since the Army asks only that it be neat. Saturday they took various written tests. Today they are slated to have personal interviews with the chaplain, and General Macon will welcome them into the Army. They also will be interviewed by their company commander.

Some time this week the recruits will move to a basic training company or battery. For the next eight weeks they will be up at 5:30 a. m. and on the move until 4:50 p. m. The training, 320 hours of it, will acquaint them most with the "soldier's best friend"—his rifle.

Recruit Robert E. Bell, 129 Ritchie ave., Silver Spring, a third mate in the wartime Merchant Marine, is in short supply as he starts drawing his Army clothing issue

Topped by the frame for his uniform cap, Pvt. Bell stands for a fitting by a civilian tailor

Despite appearances, Pvt. Bell's feet are perfectly comfortable in that contraption, which also insures a perfect shoe fit and thus more comfort later on

Emerging from the supply shack after seemingly endless fittings, Pvt. Bell stands at attention in what the well-dressed U. S. soldier is wearing these days. In all, his clothing and equipment are worth $201.99

Mute Bandit Robs Grocer Of $30 Cash

A mute bandit, who handed his victim a brown paper bag with the words "This is a holdup" printed on it, late Saturday robbed a grocery store owner of $30 in cash.

The owner, Benny Lerner, his wife and father-in-law were in the store at 520 Florida ave. nw., when the robber entered about 7:30 p. m. Lerner said the man handed him the bag, with the message printed on it in pencil, then held his hand threateningly in his pocket as if he had a gun.

Without saying a word, the thief then scooped the cash from the cash register and fled, leaving the paper bag behind him. He was described as a light-skinned Negro, about 5 feet 7 inches tall, and weighing 135 pounds. He wore a dark topcoat with the collar turned up, police said.

Charles Prestipino, 63, of 621 H st. nw., yesterday reported he was yoked and robbed of his billfold containing $135 in cash, while he was walking through Fayes ct. sw. He described the thieves as two Negroes, both of small build. One wore khaki trousers and a brown hat, he said.

Andrew L. Brown, 52, of 1381 Rittenhouse st. nw., reported he was yoked and robbed of $60 in cash and his wrist watch at the corner of 7th and K sts. nw, about 1 a. m. yesterday. First Precinct police arrested a 16-year-old youth in the same vicinity a short while later on a robbery charge. The youth was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Chest Is Still $1,565,801 Short of Goal

Greater Washington's 1949 Community Chest campaign needs more than $1,500,000 to meet its goal of $4,566,790, Chairman Chauncey G. Parker said yesterday as the drive went into its sixth week.

"The campaign is not over yet," Parker declared, "because we still have $1,565,801 to raise and because we have about 60,000 potential contributors who have not yet been reached."

Parker said progress reports scheduled for Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday of this week will "tell the story of whether the Nation's Capital will see a continuation of the drive during Thanksgiving week, or whether we shall reach our goal before then, and make a further extension unnecessary."

Volunteers reported pledges of 65.71 per cent of the Chest goal last Friday. The campaign already has been extended two weeks past its original November 4 deadline.

Traffic Accidents Take Four Lives In D. C., Fairfax

Girl of 18 Thrown From Auto Here; Three Men Killed In County Mishaps

D. C. traffic deaths, 1948.... 60
Deaths this day last year.... 64
Total traffic deaths, 1947 72

An 18-year-old girl was killed when thrown from an automobile in Washington early yesterday, and three men were killed in two traffic accidents, 4 miles apart and within a space of five minutes on Route 211 in Fairfax County, Va.

The dead:

Miss Beverly Edwards, 18, of Bloomsburg, Pa., a roomer at 4522 15th st. nw., and a fountain clerk at Peoples Drug Store, Connecticut ave. and McKinley st. nw.

Robert Lee Wells, 19, of 6 E. Swann ave., Alexandria, Va., a Capital Airlines baggage clerk at National Airport, killed when a hit-run truck hit his motorcycle.

Petitt

Gordon O. Petitt, 40, Route 5, Beulah rd. near Franconia, Fairfax County, Va., machine repairman at the Naval Ordnance Plant, Alexandria.

Henry J. Koci, 29, Route 5, King's hwy., Fairfax County, Fort Belvoir Research Laboratory worker, killed with Petitt when their automobile overturned.

Miss Edwards was killed when a new convertible driven by William B. King, 20, of 4319 44th st. nw., went over a curb on Klingle st. nw., about 100 feet east of Porter st. bridge, traveled about 100 feet, knocked over an electric light pole and careened back across the street over a center island.

Wells

At that point, police said, Miss Edwards and Miss Betty Jane Hill, her 18-year-old roommate and fellow drugstore worker, were thrown out of the car. The auto continued across the street, hit a retaining wall on the north side, came back over the center island, continued east to Adams Mill rd., then south on Adams Mill rd. for 75 feet before it stopped.

Koci

Miss Edwards was pronounced dead at Emergency Hospital at 1:52 a. m. Miss Hill was treated at Emergency for shock and bruises of the legs, hip and back, and released at 5 a. m.

King recently was discharged from the Marine Corps and was reported planning to start in college today. He was charged by police with driving at unreasonable speed. He later was freed in $1500 bond for appearance at a coroner's inquest, the date of which was not set.

Miss Hill's home is in Danville, Pa. The two girls came to Washington together a month ago. Miss Hill had quarreled with her father over the amount of money she should pay at home from her wages as a waitress, she told George P. Abernethy, their landlord. The girls rented a room at his home ttwo weeks ago, after being dissatsfied with their first rooming house.

Experience as waitresses got them jobs immediately at the drug store, where Miss Hill met King. He called for them when they finished work at 10 p. m. Saturday. Miss Hill denied a policeman's statement that King had been drinking before the accident.

Wells, Petitt and Koci, although killed in two separate accidents, were believed returning home from the same dance at a tavern on Route 211 near Centerville, Va.

Wells, riding a motorcycle, apparently was killed instantly when struck by a hit-run truck on Route 211 about 1½ miles east of Centerville, according to Fairfax County police. The truck driver stopped and then drove off when he apparently realized Wells was dead, a witness told police.

Driver Is Sought

Fairfax police said the witness described the driver of the truck as a white man, 40 to 45 years old, weighing about 160 pounds and wearing a brown jacket and brown felt hat. Police broadcast a lookout for the truck, described as a green Ford pick-up, having a broken left headlight, broken foglight and with the left front "considerably damaged."

Petitt and Koci were injured fatally when their car left the road and overturned about a mile west of Camp Washington. Frank Koci, brother of Henry, was thrown clear, unhurt, as his companions were pinned in the wreckage. They died en route to Arlington Hospital after an ambulance crew removed them from the wreckage of the car, driven by Henry Koci.

Frank Koci said he, his brother and Petitt were on their way home from a dance at a tavern near Centerville when the accident occurred. Members of Wells' family said they knew he had been to a dance in the same area, thus indicating that all three had attended the same dance.

A native of Alexandria, Wells attended George Washington High School in Alexandria, but quit school in his junior year to enter the Navy. He served two years, and was discharged several months ago.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Wells; two sisters, Mrs. Dorothy Staples and Mrs. Eunice Gibson, both of Alexandria, and a brother, James Wells, of Alexandria.

Koci, a veteran of five years' Navy service, was a native of Fairfax County. His wife died last December of leukemia. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Koci; two brothers, Fred and Frank, and a sister, Mrs. William Pullman.

Petitt, born in Alexandria, had lived in Fairfax County for 17 years with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Struder, who also are his foster parents. He is survived also by a half-brother, Franklin V. Pyles, of Franconia.

He served in the Army for a year and was discharged in October, 1943, when he went to work at the ordnance plant in Alexandria.

Each Week
Pedestrian Safety Award To Be Given

Washington policemen are going to pick a "Pedestrian of the Week" for each week left in 1948, Traffic Inspector Arthur E. Miller announced yesterday.

The "Pedestrian of the Week" award will go to the safety-alert Washington citizen who literally doesn't "walk himself to death," according to Inspector Miller's plan.

Traffic officers at specific downtown intersections will keep their eyes open for pedestrians "exerting particular caution in crossing streets," Inspector Miller said.

Winner of the weekly citation will get an "attractive award" from the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board, which is sponsoring the plan.

Decision to make the award came after safety officials noted an increase in pedestrian traffic deaths in Washington during the past two months. Although traffic deaths are five less than for the same period of 1947, pedestrian deaths are greater than a year ago, traffic records show.

Church Leader Rallies Drys To Battle On

Bishop W. E. Hammaker, president of the Board of Temperance of the Methodist Church, yesterday called for a united fight by dry forces against "the liquor traffic."

In a post-election statement on wet-dry contests, Bishop Hammaker stated that the dry forces "fought a good fight" in every State and county where there was a battle.

The Board of Temperance of the Methodist Church will increase its activities, he said.

"It is firmly convinced that the entire Christian church must throw its full weight into the battle to stop the exploitation of our young people by a vicious traffic, insatiable for profits," the bishop declared.

Drys, he said, cannot compete with the "liquor traffic" in the use of money, but the church has the human resources and the organized intelligence for a united effort which cannot be denied, he said.

Negro Cabinet Member Urged By Dr. Davies

Dr. A. Powell Davies yesterday called upon the President to appoint at least one American Negro to his Cabinet, and urged the people to write Mr. Truman "begging" him to do it.

In a sermon at All Souls' Church (Unitarian), 16th and Harvard sts. nw., Dr. Davies said such an act "would be a demonstration to the world that we mean what we say when we speak of the equal rights of free men and of the glories of democracy."

Dr. Davies said President Truman "won a great victory in spite of the attack upon him because of his sponsorship of civil rights" and urged that the President carry forward the program and prevent its enemies from interfering with it.

Rights Required, Too

"The realism of peace requires things like these just as much as military force and recovery plans," the Unitarian clergyman stated.

In the sermon, Dr. Davies said that all-out military preparation is required to end 30 years of armistice and to make possible genuine negotiations for peace. But "this cannot be enough," he said, "only a righteous nation can lead the world to peace."

It is useless to suppose that we shall win peace unless we give up the myth of white superiority, he said. "If we refuse to give it up, we shall learn someday, even if we survive earlier crises, how greatly we are outnumbered and how false our superiority has proved to be."

Contrasts Drawn

"We have not yet impressed the world with our justice, even our racial justice. We have impressed the world with our generosity, but that is a different thing," he continued.

"We have impressed the world with our prosperity, but the world will not have faith in us because of that. We must come closer to the justice of our declarations—and especially in this matter of race, in which the Communists have surpassed us," Dr. Davies stated.

Members of All Souls' Church last year adopted a resolution supporting the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights shortly after it was released.

Christian Ideal Can Bar War, Catholics Told

Americans can help prevent World War III by exemplifying Christianity in their daily lives, the Rev. John Tracy Ellis, Catholic University, professor and secretary of the American Catholic Historical Society, declared yesterday.

Dr. Ellis spoke before approximately 1500 persons at the seventh annual memorial military mass sponsored by Prince Georges Council, Knights of Columbus. The mass was held at Ritchie Coliseum at the University of Maryland in College Park.

Declaring America has forgotten the Christian ideals upon which the Nation was founded, Dr. Ellis urged Americans to set an example for their neighbors at home and abroad by trying to understand them and their problems.

The Most Rev. Patrick O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, who presided, lauded Frederick Ozanam, promoter of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, an organization of Catholic laymen devoted to spiritual and material care for the poor, and also the late Alfred E. Smith, former New York Governor. The archbishop said both were laymen who had given "light to the world through exemplary conduct."

County and State officials attending included Dr. Harry C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland; State Senator L. Harold Sothoron; State Legislative Delegates T. Raymond Burch and George C. McLeish, and Mayor Caesar L. Aiello and the City Council of Hyattsville.

Ralph J. Totten Shows New Paintings at Tea

By Marie McNair

Although Ralph Totten has managed to maintain his state of bachelorhood, for years he's had two great loves. One is painting. The other, bagging big game. Moreover, he's something of a poet, with at least one book of verse to his credit, and another on the experiences of a wild game fan.

A former United States Minister to South Africa, Mr. Totten retired a few years ago after a long career in the Foreign Service. Now, he devotes himself to water colors and oils, with an occasional safari to the North for a try at bear and moose, with his gun.

Trophies Fill Rooms

Mr. Totten's apartment, where he gave a cocktail party on Saturday, is filled with treasures and trophies, with bear skins and tiger skins on the floors; antlers and oils on the walls.

On Saturday there were new paintings for his guests to see, most of them done in Canada and Florida, of beaches and birches, lakes and the sea. And there's a particularly effective scene of the Georgetown Canal wrapped in a misty autumn haze.

I found Capt. and Mrs. John P. Jackson at the party, and Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Clarence Hewes and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman with her sister, the Countess de Castellane.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy were there with Helen Murphy's sister, Mrs. Allen Warren, visiting here from Deactur, Ala., the threesome leaving early to dress for Mrs. Katharine Byron's dinner given in honor of Mrs. Warren, whom she knew in Alabama.

Constantine de Stackelberg and Col. Robert Buggenheim talked duck shooting, the former just back from a successful trip with all that the law allows in his bag.

Mrs. Emerson Howe and Mrs. Parker West came and left together. It was Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould's first party since she came back after five months at Newport, and she found lots of old friends.

Pink Feather Hat

Mrs. Martin Vogel and Mrs. John Paterson wore two of the best looking hats in the room—the one of winter white felt with a matching bird, the other a tiny Dutch cap of sleek pink feathers. With Mrs. Vogel was her young guest, Nan Garcia, and Nan's uncle, William B. Anderson, a weekend visitor from New York.

Then there were Eben Comins, the artist; Col. Frederick Jones-Davies and D. W. Honeywell.

TOWN TOPICS:

Peppy Panama beauty, Hilda Vallarino, daughter of the former Panama Ambassador J. J. Vallarino, is back in Washington for about a week or longer with the Commercial Counselor of the Panama Embassy and Senora de Heurtematte, who entertained informally at luncheon yesterday for a group of 10. Hilda, who has been in New York for several weeks, will go home to her parents from here.

Brightening the Washington scene will be Mrs. Eugene Swigert, who arrives today from her home in Cincinnati, to visit Dr. and Mrs. Philip Owens. Wartime residents of D. C., the Swigerts who came from Chicago, left a year ago last June to make their home in Ohio.

Ruth will get right in the heart of things at the welcome home cocktail party Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Perrin will give this afternoon. And on Wednesday she'll meet some more old friends at the luncheon in her honor to be given by Mrs. Philip Strong at the Army-Navy Club.

DATE-BOOK DATA:

The Charge d'Affaires of South Africa and Mrs. T. H. Eustace have sent out white and gold crested cards for a reception on Saturday, November 20, at the Shoreham Hotel, in honor of South Africa's Ambassador-at-large and Mrs. te Water, who are visiting this country.

Gen. and Mrs. Franklin Babcock will entertain at cocktails on Thursday at the Army and Navy Club. Among the guests will be the popular Truman Smiths who used to live here. Colonel and Mrs. Smith are now residents of Connecticut.

Capt. and Mrs. Valentine Pottle will have a cocktail party on November 30—St. Andrew's Day—a day of fond memories for the hostess.

Mrs. William H. Watson, wife of Captain Watson, USN, will be hostess at luncheon on Friday as a farewell to Mme. Vesugar, wife of Janshed Vesugar of the Indian Supply Mission, who is leaving for a trip to India soon.

Couple Reports That One Thousand Dollars Spent on Urgently Needed Psychoanalysis Years Ago Is Still Paying Large Dividends

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I read your column daily and appreciate it greatly. Time was when the deeper meanings of what you say wouldn't have got across to us, but psychoanalysis has greatly improved our understanding; consequently we see in your troubled correspondents many others who would be helped by it.

We spent a thousand dollars on analysis, then had to quit for economic reasons, but we wouldn't trade the benefits derived from those sessions for 10 times the money spent. Although we weren't "cured" when we terminated the treatments, we were "over the hump" and felt much better in every way, and now, years later, we are still drawing dividends from the investment.

We are not without problems, of course, but now we are able to examine them objectively, in a healthy spirit of optimism, and choose courses of action not dictated by neurotic compulsions (we hope). Above all, we are happy together, and in that respect our experience of life is completely changed.

Their Married Life Was Bedlam at First

DICK and I were married in the 1930s. He was then 32 and I 28. We came from badly disrupted homes. In each case there had been financial insecurity, a hand-to-mouth existence and parental discord marked by periodic separations which finally ended in divorce.

Dick's father was very neurotic and his mother was psychotic. The same was true of my parents, too, except that my father was the more afflicted member of the twain. In each case divorce left the mother emotionally starved, so that she fixed on the child as a source of love, a means of support and a person on whom to exercise her aggressive impulses.

From such backgrounds, after four years' courtship pockmarked by bickering and fighting, Dick and I somehow broke away from our respective mothers and got married, and of course, all hell ensued. What with our mothers mixing in, never missing a chance to make things worse, we were just one big crazy family.

Underlying Love Averted Disaster

IN THE MIDST of our manifold problems—a blend of hard times, dependent mothers and deep-rooted guilt feelings—we proceeded to make our marriage a battleground of all the neurotic compulsions that were our heritage. Only a deep underlying love for each other, dimly visible, saved Dick and me from committing mass murder.

One day in desperation I consulted an analyst, whom I had heard lecture two years earlier; and after the fashion of neurotics, I assumed that it was Dick, not I, who needed treatment. I made an appointment for Dick to see the specialist, saying that I would keep it myself if Dick didn't. The fortunate result was that both of us started analysis, on a schedule of three sessions a week.

Thus in a sense I feel we are pioneers along the road you are guiding others, the road that leads to mental health; and looking back I realize, with profound gratitude, that I wouldn't exchange my life today for any in the whole wide world. Dick and I shall continue to read and profit from your good sound advice, because every little bit added to our knowledge helps us to mature just that much more. P. F.

Altruist Spirit Bespeaks Health

DEAR P. F.: The hallmark, indeed the dynamic center, of mental health is positive active good will towards other folks, which is the spirit manifest in your letter, both in your endorsement of my efforts and in your desire to share the good fruits of your experience with other readers, who know not where to turn for relief from anxiety-afflictions.

Incidentally, skeptics in the audience might profit by reading a sprightly educational article about psychiatry and its more searching adjunct, psychoanalysis, published in the October 25, 1948 issue of Time Magazine—an article which favorably appraises the aims and accomplishments of this new branch of healing and defines its methods in layman's language. Refinishing Maple Table

We have an inexpensive maple dinette set in our furnished apartment which is quite scratched and the table has numerous spots and rings on it. Is there some simple way to cover or refinish this furniture without the usual sanding or steel wool treatment? I have tried a thorough washing and waxing without much improvement. H. M. C.

If the furniture is in fairly good condition (not scaling or cracked) you can enamel over it without removing the old finish. Remove oil, grease and furniture polish by wiping with a cloth saturated with turpentine. Where wax has been used, this treatment must be repeated several times to insure complete removal of the wax. Follow immediately with a clean cloth, wiping until the surface is dry. Sand the old finish lightly with No. 2/0 or 3/0 sandpaper to dull the gloss and provide adhesion, then dust off. Apply one or more coats of enamel. If the new color is fairly similar to the former color in value (light or dark) one coat of new finish will usually suffice. If you are changing from a dark to a light color or vice versus, two coats will be required for complete hiding.

I have a hand-done crewel embroidered cream linen chair cover which I value highly. It is about 10 years old and has been cleaned with good quality cleaning fluid through the years, and once by an expert using a special machine. Recently I used an inexpensive cleaner which comes in a large bottle and since then I have noticed several breaks in the material. I don't know whether this is a coincidence or not. What do you think would be least harmful to the chair, to have a specialist who uses one of those suds machines, clean it myself with a good quality cleaning fluid, or not attempt to clean it at all? W. E. S.

You might have a specialist in cleaning fine fabrics look at the chair cover. When he sees it he will be in a position to advise you as to whether it would withstand cleaning. I would advise against cleaning it in any way by home methods. Whether you are able to have it cleaned or not, I suggest you make a cover of some sort for the chair. This will keep it from getting more soiled and lessen the wear on the fabric. Perhaps you could arrange a cover for just the seat of the transparent plastic sold by the yard in the drapery department of most department stores. Such a cover can be easily removed when you have guests.

Which mattress is best, the latex or regular mattress? Also, what is the composition of a regular good mattress? F. C.

Because of individual preferences in mattresses it is not really possible to say which mattress, the foam rubber or another type, is best. Here are, however, some of the factors which should be kept in mind in choosing a mattress.

There are three kinds of mattresses on the market, the innerspring, the solid all-fiber (such as hair, felt, or cotton) and the foam rubber. The innerspring or that type of mattress gives support to the body as well as resiliency and buoyancy. A good innerspring has the coils adjusted and attached to each other in such a way that they adjust automatically to weight without sagging. There are several ways that the coils are constructed by different companies and in selecting one you should be sure the coils are well padded and fastened in such a way that the ends cannot become loose and push up through the padding and cover. To prevent this, some mattresses have a continuous coil construction which has only two cut ends, where the wire starts and where it ends. The tempering or degree of hardness in the wire of the coil is as much a factor in the mattresses softness as the construction of the coils.

Most reliable firms selling mattresses have cut cross-sections of their mattresses to show the exact inner construction. In the innerspring, the springs form the center of the construction and above and below the spring is a layer of material, such as sisal, to protect the ends of the coils. Covering this are layers of felted cotton, kapok, hair or lamb's wool, and occasionally latex, to make for softness.

The solid or all-fiber mattress may be filled with cotton, hair, and lamb's wool. These mattresses vary from soft to hard. In selecting a mattress of this type be sure to get one which is put together in such a way as to avoid matting and lumping of the filling.

The foam rubber mattress is lighter in weight than the other two and is usually only three to five inches high. Because of the construction which holds air which circulates with the body movement, this mattress stays cool and does not readily absorb odors. These mattresses have been on the market for about 14 years and I am told, the early ones show no signs of deterioration of the rubber.

To Keep Slim

Plan Diet To Include Snack Time

By Ida Jean Kain

If you're not at all hungry at the moment, then it's a good time to plan to take off 10 excess pounds, or 20. Of course nobody ever goes on a diet on an empty stomach, or near the meal hour.

And speaking of eating, you probably don't need a clock to tell mealtime, or snack time. The stomach can tell time, rather accurately. This comes with training. Meal hours should be regular. But in-between meal signals are signs of a pampered appetite.

You always know when it gets along toward midmorning, if that's doughnut and coffee time. And the signal for lunch is on the dot. Then at 4, just like clockwork, the stomach again signals—teatime. And even if your watch stops, there's no danger of going past the dinner hour. Around 10:30 p. m. snack time strikes. M-m-m guess you'll see what's in the icebox . . . All this adds up to quite a few extra calories—and what happens to extra calories is plain to be seen.

Eating between meals is habit . . . but it need not be fattening. Many of you write that it's the only way you can keep from over-eating at

Here are some suggestions passed on through the letters . . .

One overweight writes that she finds it a great help to take something hot between meals. For this purpose she keeps a supply of bouillon cubes on hand and has a cup of hot bouillon mid-morning and afternoon. Another writes that instead of drinking milk with meals she has a glass of hot skimmed milk in the middle of the afternoon and another before retiring. Those are excellent plans. The milk must be skimmed, of course, to cut calories in half. Skimmed milk can be ordered from the dairy, or regular milk can be used with the top cream poured off and saved for the rest of the family. This cannot be done with homogenized milk, however. Buttermilk between meals is a good pickup.

If needed to allay hunger pangs and prevent that all-gone feeling, you can have a hot beverage, or an orangeade, buttermilk, or fruit. Calories must be counted in the day's total, of course.

Many would-be slimmer folks ask if they can save the dessert from dinner and have it later. Yes, provided it's not a fattening dessert!

Juggle the calories to fit your temperament. Just make sure to include all the protective foods needed daily and keep within your calorie budget. Happy slimming!

Varied Thoughts

For health's sake, start each day with a glass of fruit juice.

Woolens hung on the line dripping wet are not so apt to shrink as those wrung out before drying.

A thin coat of shellac or white varnish will add life to the straw matting, at the same time giving it a pleasing gloss.

A little kerosene poured into the bottom of the garbage kettle will act as a disinfectant and at the same time keep pests away.

Ordnance Wives Organize Club

"Gee, do you think I could possibly have put something wrong in my cake?"

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Weekend Duty for Dad

Mothers of young children put in a pretty intensive week. An eight-hour day is a laughable idea. By the time Saturday rolls around it is quite likely that they may be pretty well done in. One very upsetting thing, too, is that the care of young children demands so much that there is little time to follow one's own interests.

In a growing number of young families fathers are taking over for part or all of the day on Saturday or Sunday. Their wives are given an opportunity to go shopping—window or otherwise—to go to the movies or in other ways to "get away from it all."

Though such an idea may not be too popular with some young husbands, it has a number of things to recommend it in addition to the rest and relaxation it affords mothers. Children need and want closeness with fathers as well as mothers. Dads need to develop a more realistic understanding of what to expect from young children. It also may help in family relationships for fathers to realize just what is involved in caring for a couple of young children through the long day. The paternal partner may learn to appreciate the day-by-day job a mother faces, if he does take over on the weekend regularly or even occasionally.

Practical Gifts Stressed

Merchants Expect Yule Sales To Be Highest in History

By Dorothy Carew

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Storekeepers expect this Christmas season to be the biggest ever—but for the first time since the war they'll be making a real bid for your business.

Last December retail sales reached a staggering total of $12,641,000,000—the highest for any month on record.

This year merchants are confident December sales will be even better. Some forecasters set the gain at 10 to 15 per cent over a year ago, saying they expect sales to reach about 14 billion dollars.

Besides the high level of national income, retailers give these reasons for their optimism: Supplies of goods are better and more varied than they have been in years, there are more eye-catching special gift items, prices are higher but values are better, and there is a greater range of moderate-priced gifts.

Merchants are stressing the moderate price levels—for months consumers have been turning aside from high-priced luxury goods. They realize that the day has gone when the consumer would buy a gift no matter what its price.

Starting Early

Competition is back in full force. Merchants have recognized that in their selection of goods. They also plan bigger Christmas promotions than in many years—and plan to start them earlier than usual this year.

Manufacturers, too, have been giving more thought to the consumer. They have set out to develop new, fresh ideas.

Toilet goods makers have come out with a wide variety of moderate-priced cosmetic kits, toilet sets and novelties.

"There is a marked awareness of the value of Christmas gift packaging among cutlery and kitchen tool manufacturers," said Julien Elfenbein, editor of House Furnishings Review, a trade publication.

Towel manufacturers again are offering Christmas-packaged gift sets which disappeared during the war—and notion departments have everything from casual slippers to kitchen bowl covers in gift garb.

With lingerie a favorite gift item for women, one corset company is introducing in time for Christmas selling a new washable nylon velvet blouse-brassiere. A first-of-its-kind article, the company said, the garment can be worn as a blouse for daytime or evening.

The Outlook

"Practical gifts will dominate sales increases," said the International Statistical Bureau, private research firm, in a summary of the Christmas outlook.

That idea is borne out in a survey of consumers in 31 cities by Sales Management trade magazine.

The poll showed that women are asking for household goods and clothing as Christmas gifts, while men list wearing apparel as their first choice. Beyond that, women list jewelry as their third choice, and automobiles are second in line with men. After that men will take radio-television-phonograph sets.

"Only a resigned 1 per cent of the men want neckties, and perfume ranks just about as low with women," Sales Management found.

When it comes to the children, toy manufacturers expect sales to reach a new high around 300 million dollars. And there again, there is stress on moderate priced items. Toy makers say the supply of good quality moderate priced toys is far greater than a year ago.

New Ideas For Salads

If you like unusual dishes, here are three salad ideas that make collectors' items. The first one is especially good with lamb or ham. You make it by arranging halves of spiced peaches on crisp greens. Fill the peaches with whipped cream cheese seasoned highly with horse-radish.

You might try this next on Thanksgiving. It's wonderful with turkey. Alternate circles of peeled avocado and peeled ripe (but firm) persimmons on crisp greens. Serve with a tart French dressing.

The third salad has a touch of Hawaii in it. It could be called Aloha Salad. To make it, surround a snowball of cottage cheese with a lei of crushed pineapple. Soak very thin circles of raw beets in ice water, roll up three together to make a flower and garnish each snowball with one of the posies. Besides being pleasing to the taste, this salad is bright and gay to look at.

That Delicate Veil

Perhaps your new hat has one of the veils that are draped so as to stand out around the hat. When putting this hat away, put soft tissue paper in the veil so that it keeps its shape even though in the hat box.

Odors From Gasoline

The odor of gasoline can be removed from clothing by first hanging the frock out in the sun and wind for two hours and then bringing it in and hanging it where it will get a draught of warm air for a while. Warm air will frequently do much more good than the open-air treatment.

DOROTHY GETS A CHECK—Stanley A. Wiener, president of the Amity Club, and Hy Berman, former president, present a check for $100 to Dorothy Kilmer at Washington Sanitarium

It May Look Easy, But There's a Catch in It

At first glance, prize contests for housewives look ridiculously simple. "Just complete the sentence, 'I use Thistlewhist's flour because . . .' and win $25,000 in cash."

But when the lady at our house tried her hand at completing that sentence the other evening, I discovered that it was booby-trapped. After struggling valiantly for a while, she finally blurted:

"This is ridiculous. What woman can express herself in 25 words or less?"

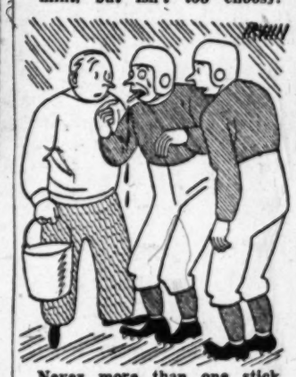
HOW GRIDMEN GET HURT

Mrs. D. H. Zenns of 335 Bughill rd. se. wrote in to ask:

"Redskin player No. 49 is John Sanchez, and I'd like a little information about him. Things like: How does he pronounce his name, what brand of gum does he chew, how many sticks at a time, etc.? Can you tell me?"

I couldn't, but Sportscaster Bob Wolff is a whiz on these things. He says it's pronounced SAN-chez, just as spelled. John is of Spanish-American descent, and went to the University of San Francisco.

He usually chews spearmint, but isn't too choosy.



Never more than one stick at a time. And never during a game.

He used to put the gum in his mouth during the pregame warmups, and keep it there all afternoon. But against Green Bay, the gum skidded just as a play was starting.

Trying to keep it from escaping, John curled his tongue around the gum, smacked into an opponent, and bit his tongue. Good and hard.

MISCELLANY

Robert W. Fairbairn of 1834 N. Quintana st., Arlington, Va., wants to know whether there's any significance to the fact that, on some days, right beside this column there appears in large letters the word JUNK . . . On election day I wisecracked that everybody would be voting except criminals, crazy people and residents of the District. George S. Corchary of the Geologic Survey office calls my attention to a story in a Concord (N. H.), paper. It tells of a prisoner in the New Hampshire State Prison casting an absentee ballot . . . Wonder if he had any trouble convincing polling officials that he was "unavoidably absent" from his home precinct . . . William V. B. Warren, commander of Victory Post No. 4 of the American Legion, says we musn't overlook the '49er dance Tuesday night (Karl Berryman's music, Kenneth Nash Clubhouse, 224 D st. se.) because it's for the post's welfare fund—which is going to send a check to Dorothy Kilmer . . . And James T. Hammatt of 4616 15th st. nw., suggests that instead of exchanging Christmas ties and such, folks ought to send the equivalent in cash to Dorothy, in the name of the person who would have gotten the tie or hankies . . . Tom Beesley of the Dorchester House reports that he's been browsing through a new cook book which is now on sale at the local bookstores, and had to laugh when he pronounced the author's name aloud. For a chef, and the author of a cookbook, you can't beat Louis de Gouy.

MAMMY!

One of the grizzled old-timers here at The Washington Post encountered an equally grizzled colleague the other day, and said:

"Say, Bill, have you seen the movie down at the Warner?"

"No," answered Bill, "I don't go to the movies much. Is it worth seeing?"

"Yes," conceded the first, "it ain't bad. They've got the doggone things fixed now so that they talk."

PERSONAL NOTES

Eugene Murphy, Fairfax, Va. When Drew Pearson computes his batting average, I presume he'll count his strikeout on the election as just one time "at bat," so the percentage will probably stay above .800.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

I think that if we could get Joe Stalin to stroll down F st. or Connecticut ave. and look at all the wonderful Christmas merchandise in the windows, we could make a capitalist of him yet.

A CAPITAL STORY

Jane Persson of 1324 Irving st. nw. points out that you can make quite a little story out of the call letters of some American radio stations. Like this:

WOLF WINX WAVE KOOL KOY KISS KOZY WARM WHAM WOW!

FIFTH FREEDOM

"We want no war," Vishinsky cries
"Just freedom, if you please."
It seems to me what Russia wants
Is freedom of the seize.

Jay Aitch,

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—In Paris on the morning after Election Day—when it was 2 a. m. in New York—reporters greeted John Foster Dulles and asked him: "How do you think the elections are going?" Dulles, who had donned a black tie for the day, told them: "I wouldn't know. You never can tell about elections." . . . He told them of 1916, when he spent the night in Woodrow Wilson's headquarters. He bought a newspaper whose headlines read: "Hughes Wins Presidency; Wife Weeps For Joy." When Dulles left, hours later, he bought the final edition of the same newspaper. The first half of the headline had been changed to "Hughes Loses Presidency." But the second half of the headline was printed without change: "Wife Weeps For Joy."

A businessman wished to retain Paul Porter as his counsel in some litigation. Porter listened to his story, and then asked if he had the necessary evidence to support his claim. The man showed him fragmentary evidence which no court would accept as proof. "Well, do you think I have a chance of winning?" he asked Porter . . . The lawyer replied: "Let me put it this way: I would prefer to sue for a pension in behalf of a woman alleging she is the widow of the Unknown Soldier, rather than take your case."

The European travel records were broken by Eleanor Roosevelt this fall . . . The American delegation to the UN drew up alternative schedules for her. The first tour was through Scandinavia, and the second was through France and Germany. They couldn't decide which route was more important and finally asked her to make the decision. "That's quite simple," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "I'll do them both," and she did.

Cy Peterman, the Philadelphia sports reporter turned diplomatic correspondent for the UN sessions, was the only reporter there to bet on Truman. He took 15 to 1 odds, and his winnings were spent on the newest Paris models for Mrs. Peterman . . . In reporting his winnings to friends in America, he cabled: "Any dumb sportswriter knows you must never overlook the underdog. (Signed) Cy Peterman, Dumb Sportswriter."

McDowell Accused of a 'Fast One'

By Drew Pearson

Congressman J. "Lrefuse-to-testify" Thomas isn't the only member of the House Un-American Activities Committee who didn't practice in his own office what he preached from the committee rostrum.

McDowell

Another who pulled a fast one behind the taxpayers' back while investigating un-Americanism in others was Pennsylvania's outgoing Congressman John McDowell.

Though McDowell didn't take kickbacks, he drew $5400 annually from the Government to pay a secretary, but used it instead to subsidize a local politician. The salary meant for McDowell's secretary went to the Republican chairman in his home town, Albert E. Beech of Wilkinsburg, Pa.

Beech, a commercial photographer, also serves in the Pennsylvania State Legislature, which pays him another $3000 each session. About the only thing he doesn't do is secretarial work for McDowell.

Note: Though McDowell comes from a predominantly Republican district, the voters got wise to him and sent a Democrat to Congress in his place on November 2. More than anyone else, the man who defeated McDowell was a Republican editor—Bert F. Kline, who campaigned against McDowell in the Homestead Messenger and Squirrel Hill News.

Taft-Hartley End

It won't be announced for some time, but here is a digest of backstage planning on the all-important question of banishing the Taft-Hartley Act at the next Congress:

1. After much discussion, the President and his labor advisers have decided that the Taft-Hartley Act should be repealed in toto, rather than "amended down" into a form acceptable to organized labor.

2. Present plans are to make Taft-Hartley repeal first on the Administration's list of "must" legislation for the new Congress.

3. Since repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act not only will eliminate many of the restrictive curbs on labor, but also wipe out collective-bargaining privileges and other vital sections of the old Wagner Labor Act embodied in it, a complete new bill will have to be drafted for congressional action.

You can jot it down that this new legislation will, of course, guarantee the two main provisions of the Wagner "magna charta" Act—labor's right to join unions of its own choosing and to bargain collectively with employers. It will also provide:

(a) The closed shop, banned under the Taft-Hartley Act, will be restored.

(b) The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, now an independent agency, will be returned to the Labor Department and given greater latitude.

(c) Presidential fact-finding boards, limited to probing disputes, will be given the power to make recommendations for strike settlement.

Anti-John L. Lewis

There will be some restrictions on labor, yet to be worked out. The President is certain to ask for a ban on both jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts. Also, a special section of the new law will deal with strikes that create national emergencies, such as John L. Lewis' tieups of the coal-mining industry.

An extended "cooling-off period," probably as long as 90 days, during which it would be unlawful to strike, may be written into the law.

President Truman is opposed to the injunction procedure of stopping strikes. At the same time, he realizes that court action may be the only means of hobbling unscrupulous labor leaders who endanger the public welfare.

Timid Judge

United States District Judge Walter C. Lindley of Danville, Ill., is one man who didn't bet on President Truman. And it may have cost him promotion to a coveted place on the United States Court of Appeals.

Shortly before elections, Attorney General Tom Clark telephoned Judge Lindley, offering him promotion to the Court of Appeals. Judge Lindley was appointed by President Harding, and is a Republican. He has had an excellent record, however, and was picked by the Truman Administration for promotion.

But when the Attorney General told him of the promotion, Judge Lindley hesitated.

"I couldn't take the oath of office now," he said. "You can send me the commission, but I won't say anything about it until after the elections."

Obviously, Judge Lindley figured Truman was going to lose, and he would not be confirmed by the Senate. Now that Truman has won, the Justice Department is not inclined to promote a judge who would not take a chance on Truman.

Election Tallies

There has been a lot of talk about who did and who didn't stand up to be counted for Truman before election. Former Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia was in the pro-Truman category, predicted in the Atlantic Monthly in October that Truman would win . . . Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer also predicted Truman . . . Ed Lagron, Florida chairman of the Democratic Veterans Affairs Committee, had a hard time raising money for Truman. He needed $1500 for campaign expenses. So he borrowed $200 from friends, placed it at 7½ to 1 in New York, and thus the Republicans paid the $1500 for the veteran's Democratic campaign in Florida.
